Premier Dave Barrett today announced five new ministers for his cabinet and gave Highways Minister Robert Strachan a new portfolio with added responsibilities, including the presidency of the B.C. Railway.

The new ministers are:

Gary Lauk, MLA for Vancouver Centre, who becomes Minister of Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce. The portfolio is currently held by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

Graham Lea, MLA for Prince Rupert, becomes Minister of Highways.

Jack Radford, MLA for Vancouver Centre, becomes Minister of Recreation and Conservation, relieving Resources Minister Bob Williams of one-half of his double portfolio.

Phyllis Young, MLA for Vancouver-Little Mountain, becomes Minister Without Portfolio responsible for consumer affairs, a newly-created post.

Lorne Nicolson, MLA for Nelson-Creston, becomes Minister Without Portfolio responsible for housing, also a new position.

Strachan, former NDP leader, becomes Minister of Commercial Transportation and Communications, a new department. Strachan will retain responsibility for the B.C. Ferries, all government aircraft, the Motor Vehicle branch, the data processing branch and will remain president of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia.

Strachan was also appointed to the board of directors of the B.C. Railway, and will become chairman of the board and president of the railway in the spring of 1974.

Barrett said it is his intention to make Strachan president of the railway as soon as negotiations with the federal government on rail development are completed and when consultants' reports are completed and reviewed by the legislature.

The premier said Nicolson and Young will become full members of the cabinet when constitutional amendments are finalized setting up departments of housing and consumer affairs.

He said the necessary legislation will be passed possibly in the fall session and at the very latest at the spring session of 1974.

Barrett's appointment of new ministers leaves only himself and Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall with double portfolios. Hall is also responsible for travel industry while Barrett holds the finance portfolio.

The premier said consolidated

B.C. Civil Servants Get 10%

Tentative agreement has been reached for salary increases of 10 per cent and more for the province's 31,000 public servants.

The announcement came today from Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall and John Fryer, general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Union (BCGEU).

All public servants earning $750 per month or less will get an across-the-board increase of $75 per month. Those public servants making more than $750 per month will get raises of 10 per cent.

RETROACTIVE TO APRIL 1
The increases for both groups will be retroactive to April 1 of this year, and will be reflected in June pay cheques.

Also tentatively agreed upon after Thursday's full day of negotiating was improvement in vacations for 1973.

Employees with 10 years' service or more will receive 17 days of vacation and employees with 15 years' service or more will get four weeks.

Hall also announced sizeable increases in salaries to be paid deputy ministers in the civil service. They are now paid between $25,000 and $27,000 a year.

Under the new agreement, deputy ministers will get between $33,000 and $42,000 per year, depending on the classification in which the government places them. Hall said the criteria for classification of deputy ministers will be made public within a few weeks.

$14 MILLION TAB

Hall said salary increases for all civil servants will cost the provincial treasury about $14 million in the present fiscal year, of which $8.5 million was allowed for in this year's budget. He said the rest of the money will be provided through special warrants.

Fryer expressed satisfaction with the negotiated increases, saying the BCGEU's negotiating committee will recommend acceptance of the agreement to the union membership.

He said there was "a real sense of give and take" throughout the negotiating session, which he said was much different from negotiating sessions with previous governments.

"In these negotiations we were able to reach a satisfactory agreement without rattling the sabres and pounding the table," he said.

The BCGEU represents 18,000 of the province's 31,000 public servants. Hall said the negotiated increases will apply to all public servants, not only those in the BCGEU.

"From the viewpoint of the government and the people of the province, these negotiations are a positive indication that proposed collective bargaining legislation for provin-

QUIT AT 100, LIVE TO 140

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — A United States veterans administration study suggests that life expectancy in coming decades could be increased to 120-to-140 years if the retirement age is increased to 100.

Dr. Roy M. Hamlin, a research psychologist at the Danville, Ill., administration hospital, has found indications that people live for as long as they feel needed. "Thus research on old age stresses behavioral programs.

THOUSANDS PREFER FICTION

NEW YORK (AP) — The televised Watergate hearings spent more than five hours Thursday angering game-show fans and those who find more drama in soap opera than in the hunt for the truth in the packed Senate Caucus Room in Washington.

The start of the hearings before the Senate committee marked the first time since February, 1966, that all three United States networks televised all or part of a Senate hearing live.

But a sample check of television stations around the U.S. showed that thousands of viewers preferred entertainment to history. They said so in irate phone calls that swamped switchboards.

"They're killing us," said a Columbia Broadcasting System operator here.

Nixon 'Was Aware'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Watergate conspirator James McCord Jr. testified today that he was told by a White House aide that President Nixon "was aware" of efforts to pressure McCord to keep quiet and plead guilty in the bugging case with a promise of executive clemency later.

Testifying under oath at the second day of senate hearings into the Watergate scandal, McCord said the clemency offer had been made to him by White House staffer John Caulfield at a private meeting during the Watergate trial in January.

"Political pressure from the White House was conveyed to me in January, 1973, by John Caulfield to remain silent, take executive clemency by going off to prison quietly," McCord said softly.

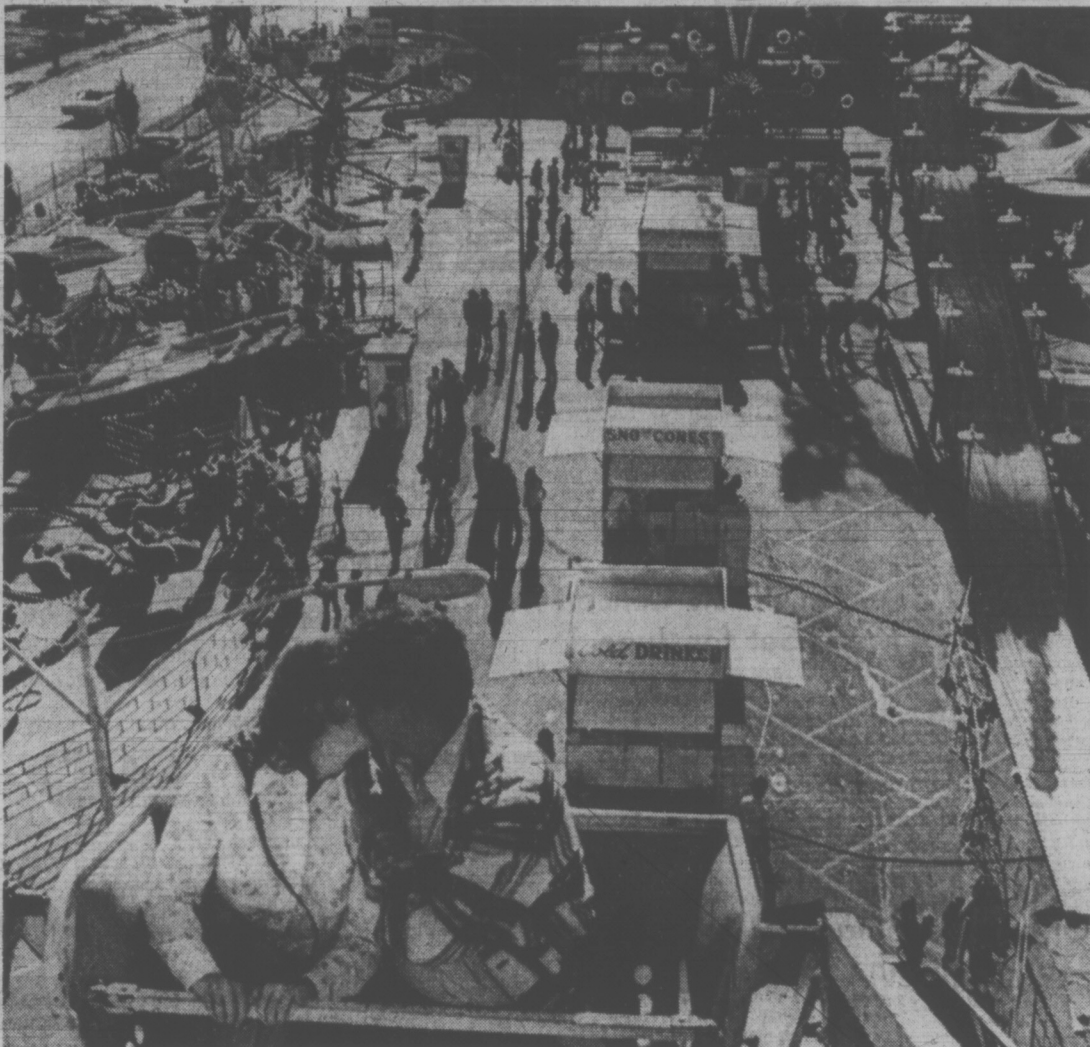

"And I was told that while there I would receive financial aid and later rehabilitation and a job," he continued. "I was further told in a January meeting in 1973 with Caulfield that the president of the United States was aware of our meeting, that the result of our meeting would be conveyed to the president, and at a future meeting there would likely be a personal message from the president himself."

Committee chairman Sam Ervin, D-N.C., interrupted as McCord read from a prepared statement to caution that the testimony was purely hearsay.

"The testimony of Mr. McCord as to what was told to him by John Caulfield would not be accepted in a court of law, to connect the president with what Mr. Caulfield was doing," Ervin said.

"But it is admissible to show whether or not Mr. Caulfield is a party to any agreement to attempt to suppress information about what is popularly known

POLLUTING 'LICENCE'

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. was fined $1,000 in provincial court today for polluting the air around its plant here.

In passing sentence, Judge Joseph McMahon said Ford was using the court as a "licensing bureau" to permit it to continue breaking the law.

Judge McMahon said Ford had done everything it could to comply with provincial legislation short of closing the foundry. He said Ford will continue polluting the air because technology cannot stop it.

ICCS Money Crisis

Times News Services

The International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) is facing "an emergency financial crisis," commission sources said today.

The sources added that the commission no longer has enough funds to pay its private contractors, although, so far, none of the contractors has cut off services.

It is understood that the ICCS owes almost $750,000 to Air America, which supplies all air services for the commission.

The ICCS has asked the four parties to the Paris peace agreement — the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the Viet Cong — to match their original contribution of 4.5 million French francs apiece as an interim measure. There has been no reply from any of the parties. The issue was to be discussed at a meeting of the commission today.

In Paris, U.S. foreign affairs adviser Henry Kissinger and North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho Thursday began and ended in a show of smiles and handshakes their first closed-door meeting to salvage the precarious Vietnam cease-fire agreement they negotiated

Ulster Car Bomb Kills 4 Soldiers

BELFAST (CP) — Four soldiers died in a car-bomb explosion in Omagh today after one of Northern Ireland's bloodiest nights in years. The 24-hour death toll stood at eight.

The other four were a cattle dealer shot near the Irish republic, a Catholic killed while playing darts, a sniper shot by an army marksman, and a 14-year-old Catholic schoolgirl who died in the hospital today after being wounded in a gun-battle Thursday night.

The girl, Eileen Mackin, and a friend were both hit when gunmen opened fire on a motorized army patrol in Belfast's Springfield area.

The car bomb caused the highest death toll in a single incident for British troops since they were first called in to help combat the sectarian violence that erupted in Northern Ireland four years ago.

The bomb exploded as the soldiers got into the booby-trapped car. It left a two-foot-deep crater in the ground and scattered the men's bodies all over the hotel parking lot and a nearby field.

All the soldiers were off duty at the time. Earlier in the night a 22-year-old cattle dealer, Michael Leonard, was shot with in sight of the Irish republic border while fleeing from police in County Fermanagh.

Police chased his car as the man ignored repeated orders to halt. He was finally brought down only a few hundred yards from the frontier and died in hospital later.

In London, airline pilots scheduled a meeting to decide their action in face of an IRA threat to wreck Belfast's Aldergrove Airport and any planes using it.

A statement from the militant IRA Provisionals said they regard the airport as a target and warned crews and passengers their lives are in danger.

Two bombs were found on the runways early Thursday. One exploded, causing slight damage. The other was defused.

COLD BEER CAME AHEAD OF SCIENCE

SOUTHAMPTON (AP) — Police today arrested two crew members of a British exploration ship just back from the Antarctic on charges of throwing overboard valuable biological specimens kept in the ship's refrigerator because they were interfering with their supply of cold beer.

Sir Vivian Fuchs, British Mount Everest and Antarctic explorer, told a dockside news conference the specimens disappeared about two weeks ago.

"The specimens represent a year's work for two men, which would have led to higher degrees," he said. "The loss is very serious."

The ship brought back about 20 scientists and support workers who have been in the Antarctic for periods up to two years.

Ottawa to Fight Quebec on TV

OTTAWA (UPI) — Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said today the Quebec government had overstepped its jurisdiction when it used a form of licences to cable television companies. He said the federal government would fight the provincial action.

In a statement to the House of Commons, Pelletier attacked the recent issuance by the Quebec Public Service Board of temporary certificates to cable TV companies

"purporting to authorize them to continue operating pending the issuance of a permanent provincial licence."

"Federal legislative authority over radio communications and broadcasting, including community antenna television undertakings, has been upheld in all the relevant decisions of the courts," the federal minister said.

"In our view, these actions by the Public Service Board of Quebec, with the support of the responsible Quebec minister, are consequently ultra vires (beyond their jurisdiction) and represent an encroachment on federal authority which the government intends to resist by all the means at its disposal."

Pelletier said the Quebec action was "particularly disappointing" in view of the federal policy proposals a month ago to grant the provinces substantially more say in communications policy. He noted the proposals are to be discussed with the provinces at a conference this fall.

"In these circumstances," he said, "the government is not prepared to accept unilateral action by any province."

"The government is, nevertheless, quite willing to enter into discussion with the government of Quebec with a view to determining the most appropriate means for having the constitutional issue involved in this matter settled by the courts, the governments of the other provinces being kept informed of these discussions.

"I further wish to give notice that in the event the government of Quebec persists in its intended action, the government will not hesitate to initiate appropriate action on its own behalf including action in the courts if necessary," Pelletier said.

In an exchange of correspondence in February, Pelletier had warned Quebec Communications Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier the federal government would not accept its planned action in the cable TV field.

BONN ARMED FOR BREZHNEV

BONN (AP) — Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev arrived today for his first trip to the West in 19 months.

The West German capital has been turned into a virtual fortress for the occasion by a small army of protecting police.

The Russian leader's five-day summit meeting with Chancellor Willy Brandt marks, symbolically at least, a significant step toward healing the wounds of a war that killed 20 million Russians and more than 3½ million Germans.

Brezhnev is the first Soviet leader to visit West Germany and the most guarded official guest the Bonn government has ever had.

ation of the travel industry department into the trade department is "under consideration."

Full cabinet ministers are paid $24,000 per year in addition to their salaries as MLAs, which amount to $12,000 per session. Ministers without portfolio receive $21,000 per year in addition to their MLA salaries.

Today's appointments bring to 19 the number of ministers in the provincial cabinet.

Not affected by Barrett's announcement are Hall, Public Works Minister Bill Hartley, Labor Minister Bill King, Health Minister Dennis Cooke, Education Minister Eileen Dally, Mines Minister Leo Nimsick, Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, Human Resources Minister Norman Levi and Minister Without Portfolio Frank Calder, who is responsible for Indian affairs.

Another minister whose workload is reduced to a single portfolio is Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer, whose responsibility for commercial transport is transferred to Strachan.

Barrett said the government is considering an expansion of the department of recreation and conservation to include more responsibility for the environment. It had been speculated that a department of the environment would be created, but Barrett said this is not planned in the near future.

Lauk, 32, is a Vancouver lawyer and graduated from the University of British Columbia. He was elected for the first time in the 1972 election.

Lea, 39, is a former broadcaster. He is married with three children and served with the RCAF from 1951 to 1954.

Nicolson, 36, is a teacher in Nelson and is married with two children. He was a defeated candidate in the 1969 election and defeated former Provincial Secretary Wesley Black in the 1972 election.

Young, 48, was born and educated in the United States, where she was a staff sergeant in the U.S. Army from 1953 to 1955. She has been active in the labor movement in Vancouver and is a member of the executive board of the Status of Women Council. She was also elected for the first time in 1972.

Radford, 44, was born at Nanaimo and educated in Ladysmith and at UBC. He is married with four children and has also worked in the trade union movement with the Canadian Labor Congress and the B.C. Federation of Labor. He was elected for the first time in the 1972 election.

cial government employees will work well," Hall said.

Commenting on what he called the "healthy" increase to deputy ministers as well as the over-all increase to civil servants, Hall said:

"Performance is the name of the game throughout our public service. We want a first class civil service, we want to pay them well and we want a good piece of work from them."

The tentative settlement was reached Thursday night.

It is expected further salary increases for B.C. public servants will be arrived at through collective bargaining procedures, the machinery for which was introduced by the government during the recent session of the legislature but later shelved.

The salary increases will make the lowest salary paid by the government $420 per month. The highest will be $42,000 per year to selected deputy ministers.

McCord Told Nixon Knew about the Watergate affair at this stage."

Sen. Edward Gurney, R-Fla., immediately said that in January, 1973 Caulfield was not in the White House and was instead employed at the treasury department and "I hope we can correct these things as we go along."

A treasury department spokesman announced last Sunday that Caulfield had asked for and taken "administrative leave" from his job following a published report about his alleged efforts to pressure McCord.

McCord said he turned down Caulfield's offer the night of Friday, Jan. 12.

McCord testified that Caulfield told him then that the offer of clemency and a job "was a sincere offer" which Caulfield said came "from the highest levels of the White House."

Testimony Hurts Stocks

Stock prices plunged further on Wall Street today as investors watched the Watergate testimony and saw the dollar attacked again.

The 2 p.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 15.05 points at 896.67.

Analysts said the flow of revelations from the Watergate scandal is weighing heavily on the market.

In Europe, the price of gold again edged up slightly and the U.S. dollar dropped, making investors fear a recession may be coming.

Duncan Concert Set for June 1

DUNCAN — A concert sponsored by the Cowichan Music Festival Committee will be held at the Senior Citizens' Activity Centre on June 1 at 8:15 p.m.

The main purpose of the concert is to raise money for 14-year-old Michele Fulmore, who will sing with the 20-voice Victoria Conservatory choir in an international music festival in Wales this summer.

The choir will also sing at various centres in Britain, appear in Westminster Abbey in London and at the International Youth Concert in Brighton.

He quoted Caulfield as saying, "I may have a message to you at our next meeting from the president himself."

McCord said he spurned the clemency offers despite what he believed was an implied threat of unspecified retaliation for his refusal to go along with "the game plan."

In flat, unemotional tones, McCord also said he had been told by two co-conspirators that the plot to bug Democratic headquarters at the Watergate had been conceived and approved early last year by then-attorney general John Mitchell, White House counsel John Dean, and Jeb Stuart Magruder, then acting Nixon campaign manager.

He said he "would not have participated" if he had not been told the plan had such high-powered backing.

In other developments Thursday:

In a television interview, Dean said President Nixon could have said more than he did in his televised Watergate speech, and would have looked better if he had. But Dean would not elaborate on what disclosures the president could have made in his April 30 speech, saying: "I would rather not get into that now because they were unsaid..."

Dean commented on a CBS interview with Walter Cronkite, taped as the Senate Watergate investigating committee began its public hearings.

Dean said he had no knowledge of the Watergate break-in, and expressed disappointment that Nixon didn't go further in his speech.

Archibald Cox, former U.S. solicitor general, was chosen as the special prosecutor for the government's Watergate case by Elliot Richardson, attorney-general designate.

Former Central Intelligence Agency chief Richard Helms told the Senate Armed Services Committee he does not know whether President Nixon realized top White House aides were trying to use the CIA to cover up the Watergate scandal.

A firm headed by a Nixon campaign leader in Florida was revealed to have received a $75,000 federal grant last year after a national official of President Nixon's re-election committee intervened with a presidential aide to have the grant submitted from the White House.

A federal grand jury ordered Gulf Resources and Chemical Corporation's vice-president Arthur Ureth to testify today in its investigation of a Watergate-tainted $100,000 Nixon campaign contribution made by the company's president.

Donald Segretti, accused of political sabotage, pleaded innocent to two counts of violating federal campaign laws and was freed on a $10,000 personal recognizance bond.

He pleaded innocent to charges of distributing and conspiring to distribute a piece of phony campaign literature which has come to be known as the "Muskie letter."

Integrate Public Housing Is Advice of Minister

Public housing must integrate with the community, says Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer.

It's the only way it will succeed, he added after the official opening Thursday of Edgeland, a 20-unit low rental project in Saanich.

And, he said, people on middle incomes will be helped, along with the poor and aged under a new provincial housing ministry.

Edgeland is the third Saanich-sponsored public housing scheme provided under terms of the National Housing Act with provincial government participation.

A two-acre park is part of the project which is bounded, on three sides, by single family homes. It is located off Interurban Road.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said this was not the "uninteresting, ghetto-type concrete box found in other communities across the land. Saanich had not been pushed into it. We jumped into family housing with our eyes open."

Lorimer said he hoped other municipalities, which failed to respond under the previous government, would follow what Saanich has done and provide housing for all needy families, not simply the aged.

But the province will do more on its own, he said later. Projects would be initiated at the provincial level, he said.

"It's not just the poor now," he said. "Those making under $10,000 a year may not be able to afford housing. If mommy and daddy can't help out, it's pretty tough for these people."

"That's why housing requires a fulltime minister to deal with all types of housing, including mortgages," the minister said.

Saanich housing committee chairman Ald. Edith Gunning predicted that one day the Edgeland development, with others, would be available for individual purchase.

The 16 two-bedroom and four three-bedroom units in five attached structures will rent for up to $125 a month, depending on tenant's income, starting in July.

Operation will be by B.C. Housing Management Commission.

VIETNAM

last winter. The two, meet again today.

The North Vietnamese have made no secret of their belief that Kissinger and the Nixon administration in the U.S. have been weakened by the Watergate scandal. Specifically, U.S. congressional opposition to funding further bombing of Cambodia has undercut veiled American threats to resume bombing of North Vietnam if Hanoi's alleged violations of the cease-fire did not stop.

In fighting in Vietnam, Communists using some of the biggest guns in their arsenal blasted the defence line around Hue with nearly 600 rounds in the past 24 hours, the Saigon command said today, in the first such attack there since the Vietnam cease-fire.

Among the guns used in the attack were Soviet-made 130-mm cannon, the command said. The 130s are the largest guns in the Communist arsenal and have a range of 17 miles.

Communist gunners, meanwhile, ambushed a Mekong River convoy cruising under the protection of intense U.S. airpower Thursday night, but seven of the eight ships made it to the besieged Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh with badly needed fuel and ammunition.

Communists set three of the ships afire, forcing one aground 14 miles southeast of Phnom Penh at Tuk Kheang. Efforts were under way today to tow the vessel, the Panamanian-registered Ever Success, into port at the capital.

100 Feared Dead In Ship Sinking

RANGOON, Burma (Reuters) — More than 100 persons were feared drowned when a government-owned ship sank in the Irrawaddy River northwest of Rangoon, said reports reaching here today.

The vessel, Tawpan, sank off Magwee, about 240 miles northwest of Rangoon, Thursday morning, the reports said.

Two-Price Fuel Studied

LIVING DANGEROUSLY, these teenagers bask in the sun while stretched across a railroad-track in White Rock.

OTTAWA (CP) — A two-price oil and gas system to prevent Canadian consumers from being hurt by the United States energy shortage is under consideration by the federal government, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday.

He told the Commons the proposal is being given close scrutiny because the government does not want Canadians to foot the bill for U.S. energy shortages.

If adopted, the system would mean one price for oil and gas exported to the U.S. and a second for oil and gas products used in Canada.

Macdonald was responding to a question from Tommy Douglas (NDP — Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) who said Canadian oil companies are taking advantage of the United States' shortage to raise prices in Canada.

Recent price increases announced by major companies have nothing to do with production costs or supplies, he said. There are merely a response to demand in the U.S.

Macdonald said oil costs are rising in eastern Canada because of higher prices for foreign oil. But a two-price system might be adopted if prices continue to rise in the rest of Canada which is supplied by oil from western Canada.

For the moment, he said, Canadian oil exports do not appear to be affecting supplies available at home. But the situation was being watched closely and action would be taken if necessary.

Douglas said a U.S. shortage of 400,000 barrels a day has been predicted for this summer. He expressed concern that this could lead to a gasoline shortage in Canada.

Although some restrictions had been placed on Canadian exports, they did not apply to gasoline.

Que. Protesters Storm Unemployment Offices

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP)—About 30 persons stormed two Unemployment Insurance Commission offices in this community 25 miles north of Montreal Thursday, ejected five officials for "illegal activities" and boarded up one office.

The group, known as Le Local Populaire du Sud-Ouest du Montreal, charged members of the UIC appeal board with disregarding citizens' rights.

Members of the protest group calmly herded the board's four members out of the office and then nailed it shut with four-foot boards and placards.

A fifth UIC employee was brought outside to answer allegations of having convoked board hearings on 24 hours notice so disqualified claimants were unable to prepare their defence.

Michel Dansereau, speaking for the group, cited 11 alleged cases of such short notice involving local claimants and asked UIC clerk Guy Surprenant;

"Who do you think you are to call people to hearings this illegal way?"

Surprenant said the 11 cases, heard May 3, could be heard again. But the protesters were not satisfied and demanded to know why such "illegal activities" occurred in the first place.

Dansereau said a claimant normally has five to 10 days to prepare a defence.

The group, which specializes in defending disqualified claimants, sent an open letter to Guy Cousineau, federal UIC director, demanding that all such cases be re-opened, the local board "condemned for suspicious activities" and Surprenant fired.

Paul Larocque, public relations director for the UIC Montreal area, said it was "the first time in UIC history" that plaintiffs had not been sent letters a week in advance of their scheduled appearance.

The local situation appeared to be an unfortunate piece of "bad luck."

Davis Wins UVic's Top Award

Kenneth George Davis, a 21-year-old honors physics student, has won the Governor-General's Medal for the University of Victoria.

The medal goes to the student with the highest average in the graduating class of the faculty of arts and science.

Davis will receive the award at UVic convocation ceremonies May 26, and is planning to get married the same day.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davis of Vernon, Davis plans to take his professional year in education next fall.

He won the B.C. Telephone scholarship of $100 in 1970-71. The same year he won the B.W. Pearce scholarship of $200, for top student in honors physics. He won this scholarship again in 1972, as well as the $250 President's Scholarship.

Shirley Ann Forrester, 34, of Grand Forks, will receive the Dr. Maxwell A. Cameron Memorial Medal (Elementary).

The Cameron award goes to final year education students with highest standing in general proficiency in practice teaching.

George Fraser, 35, of 3270 Shelley St., is winner of the Dr. Maxwell A. Cameron Memorial Medal (Secondary).

War Control Bill Passes

WASHINGTON (WP) — In a move to assert U.S. congressional control over the war powers, the senate foreign relations committee voted 15 to 0 Thursday to forbid the president to wage undeclared war for more than 30 days unless he comes back to congress for approval.

The bill, sponsored by Sens. Jacob K. Javits (R-N.Y.), Thomas F. Eagleton (D-Mo.) and John Stennis (D-Miss.) is one of the centrepieces of the congressional drive to regain from the presidency powers which many senators believe have gradually been surrendered to the White House in recent decades.

The bill spells out a handful of emergency situations in which the president may commit U.S. forces to battle without first obtaining a declaration of war. These include response to an armed attack on the U.S. or its forces stationed outside the U.S., or imminent danger of such attack. However, the bill provides that the president within 30 days must cease these, or any other military operations which haven't been specifically authorized in advance, unless he obtains the approval of a majority of both chambers of congress for the hostilities to continue.

Among Our Chief Assets

The exhibition of masterpieces of Chinese art now on show at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Moss Street, is a selection of more than 150 of the best pieces from the Royal Ontario Museum. The show, which continues for another two weeks, provides an opportunity for the people of this community to enjoy a collection which they would never otherwise see without travelling to Toronto. So highly does the Royal Ontario Museum value its treasures — and understandably so — that a sampling as large as this has never before been lent out to another gallery. The Montreal Museum of Fine Arts will be the only other gallery to show the collection now in Victoria.

The presence of the current exhibition is therefore a high tribute to the standing of the local Gallery in Canadian art circles — and, indeed, in North America. The show is a reciprocal courtesy from Toronto to repay Victoria for the earlier loan of 101 pieces from our Japanese collection. This collection, consisting principally of the wealth of treasures donated during the past few years by Mrs. Isabel Pollard, formerly of Victoria and now of San Francisco, has won international attention and has put Victoria on the map for thousands of art lovers on this continent.

Although the local Gallery has more paid-up members per capita than any other in Canada, it has habitually suffered from a shortage of operating funds. Only a year ago it was faced with the prospect of having to close temporarily or reduce its already minimum staff, because it did not have the required money in prospect. It weathered the crisis, but the situation is still far from satisfactory.

No art gallery can exist on members' dues and entrance fees alone. Some form of subsidization is needed. The councils of Greater Victoria have given assistance in the past, although not on a par with that given in other comparable Canadian cities. The provincial government also provides grants — and it is hoped that a new governmental attitude toward educational and cultural institutions may release larger sums in the future. The federal government, through various funds, has also contributed to specific activities of the Gallery — publications, special courses, extension of work up-Island, and similar efforts.

But what the Gallery would particularly welcome would be the support of more of the people of Greater Victoria through their membership or their attendance at exhibitions and other activities. For in that way, the Gallery would be giving as well as receiving. It would be fulfilling the function for which a generation of Gallery members has steadily worked, and it would be adding still more to the interest, education and entertainment of the people of this community.

It is an anomaly that the gallery's importance and status does not arouse among some Greater Victorians the excitement that many people from other cities feel about it. For many visitors, Victoria is the "place with the Japanese collection." The Art Gallery is one of our important assets, whether considered from the artistic, educational, or tourist aspects. We should support it on a level in keeping with its stature.

A Top on Medical Incomes

TORONTO — The Medical Review Committee of the College of Physicians and Surgeons is advising general practitioners in Ontario that from May 1 on, their medicare bills will be subject to a "quality service payment formula," the general effect of which will be to limit them to gross earnings of about $7,200 a month.

That, as the man said, is pretty gross but it should be noted that only about five per cent of Ontario's 5,000-odd GPs have been claiming over $7,000 a month from the Ontario Health Insurance Plan. Most family doctors have OHIP billings of between $1,000 and $5,000 a month.

Still, the new policy is a fascinating reflection of the medical profession's thinking and a horrible indication of just how far the government has surrendered control of medicare costs to the doctors. Perhaps the most distressing aspect of the matter is that senior members of the government are not even aware that control has been lost.

Powerful Doctors' Group

The Medical Review Committee is not merely a committee of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. It enjoys certain powers under the Ontario Health Insurance Act, the most important of which is the power to make binding "recommendations" as to what OHIP should do whenever OHIP turns up a questionable bill from a doctor.

This power is spelt out quite specifically in law. Whenever the General Manager of OHIP believes that a doctor's services were not in fact rendered, or were not medically necessary, or were misrepresented, or were not provided in accordance with accepted professional standards and practice, he must refer the matter to the Medical Review Committee and he must pay, or not pay, such amount as recommended by the Committee.

Clearly, therefore, the Committee has power to decide disputed accounts (which is bad enough, considering that the Committee consists of five doctors and one layman) — but only on reference from OHIP. It has no power to determine government policy in advance or dictate OHIP operating procedures.

Yet that is what the Committee has done in announcing its "quality service payment formula" to the general practitioners. The formula is not merely a recommendation to government; it is a statement of policy which the Committee intends to follow in deciding claims referred to it by OHIP, which is fair enough, and it is a directive to OHIP establishing criteria for the referral of claims, which is intolerable.

In other words, the doctors are not only telling the government what to pay when there is a questionable bill, they are now telling the government what constitutes a questionable bill.

In the case of general practitioners (formulas for other branches of medicine are to follow), a questionable claim dence to the contrary, it will conclude the doctor is seeing too many patients and therefore not offering an acceptable quality of service, and "tax" his claims accordingly. Thus a doctor claiming 400 units a week will find, unless he can satisfy the Committee otherwise, that his OHIP payment has been reduced by one-third.

There is much to be said for this system in principle, of course, but not much for the way it has been applied. The Committee has defined a very high threshold of quality medical care: 300 units of service a week is the equivalent. In its simplest form, of 300 office calls a week, or 60 a day or, assuming 10 hours of work a day, six patients an hour. At $5.40 an office visit (OHIP pays only 90 per cent of the OMA tariff), this also works out to about $7,200 a month or, assuming a month's vacation, $79,200 a year.

At such levels there is not going to be much saving in public costs, since relatively few GPs are claiming that kind of money from OHIP now. Indeed, the net result may well be to increase OHIP costs since doctors are being told, in effect, that as long as they keep their claims to below 300 units of service a week, OHIP's computer will not go "tilt" on them.

Strange Behavior

Such considerations are perhaps the explanation for the strange behavior of the government when questioned about the new policy. When it first came to light a few weeks ago, Health Minister Richard Potter confessed he knew little about it, saying it was only a "recommendation" and a "suggestion" from the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

More recently, Robert Welch, the superminister responsible for social development, similarly insisted — with a blithe disregard for the fact that OHIP's computers have already been changed over to the new system — that it was all a "concept" put forward by the College, did not reflect government policy, and certainly did not constitute the long-awaited "restraint package" which the government has been preparing to curb medicare costs and which the government would announce in the fullness of time.

It does rather make one wonder who's minding the store.

is one which exceeds 300 units of service a week, a unit being defined as an office call or, more technically, a partial assessment worth $6 according to the Ontario Medical Association tariff. Other services are rated accordingly: a $4 hospital call, for example, is .66 of a unit, a $9 house call is 1.5 units, and so on.

The OHIP computer has been programmed to read out the accounts of GPs whose services in excess of 300 units a week have been claimed for, and these accounts are then referred to the Medical Review Committee for investigation. Unless the Committee finds evi-

The Answer Lies in Supply

WASHINGTON — The hopes that labor would co-operate in setting a non-inflationary pattern of United States wage gains during 1973 went glimmering in the cold deliberations of George Meany's Executive Council on Wednesday.

The international presidents joined Meany in a resolution which signalled all labor leaders to go out and get what they can negotiate. There is no longer any mood of deference within labor ranks toward President Nixon's Phase Three, which Meany described four months ago as "a step in the right direction."

The tough old labor patriarch, who went into the year believing that his neutrality in the presidential election would yield accommodations in labor's dealings with the White House, talked of Mr. Nixon within the council as an enemy of the American worker. "I have no illusions," he is reported to have said. "This administration is out to kill us."

No Walkout

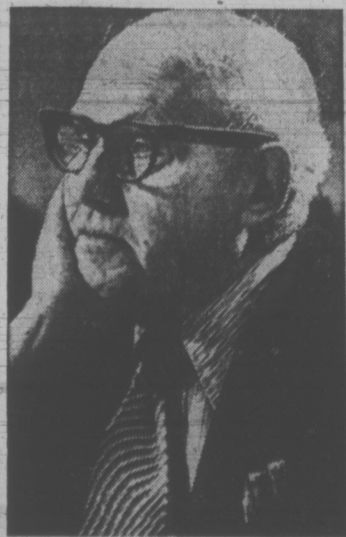

Meany did not lead his labor colleagues in a walk off the Labor-Management Advisory Committee, a step that would have punctuated his disappointment in the price trends of 1973. The administration's most effective labor diplomats, George Shultz and John Dunlop, had applied their influence to keep this from happening, and Meany bent to the logic of staying put.

He explained to the international presidents that he was not urging a walk off the committee because he had gone through the on-again, off-again gesture on many previous boards and did not want this year to set the trade unions up as a target for the blame which is going to be generated by the failure of the administration's economic policies.

Meany maintained that labor's membership on the committee doesn't mean anything because the union members are not consulting with anyone on the negotiating issues. "We're listening to what they have to say," he added, "and they are saying nothing." He said he had barely bothered to attend the most recent meetings.

The bristling mood within the Executive Council was sharpened by reports from Akron where the president of the Rubber Workers Union, Peter Bommarito, has been pushed into a struggle for survival by the pressures he exerted to make his union members swallow a "responsible" settlement. As one colleague put it, "Bommarito short-changed the workers to make points with Meany who was making points with Nixon, and now he is in deep trouble."

... get what they can

These developments have not dented the composure of John Dunlop, the shrewd, assured Harvard professor whom the President chose, at Shultz's behest, to preside over Phase Three. He knows the union leaders well enough to find their reaction to the price pattern predictable, and his confidence is unshaken in the course to which he and Shultz have committed the government.

Dunlop still sees enlarged supplies as a better and wiser answer than controls to the stubborn rise in the prices of food and manufacturing materials. He concedes that the freeze of 1971 was useful in dealing with the inflationary expectations which existed then. But this is not medicine, he warns, that the public will take too often. He opposes controls now because they will exaggerate the distortions imposed by Phase Two and because they run counter to the nation's priority need to get out of the control business.

As an anti-inflation strategist, Dunlop gains credibility from his success at shrinking the sky-high wage gains that the building trades locals were racking up until he came on the scene in 1971. He was being castigated from all sides a year ago, and he said little to defend his low-profile style of mediation. But the agreeable fact is that the building trades locals are today settling, one after the other, for wage gains of less than 5 per cent.

Test Ahead

The real question is whether the same canny dealings can do the job on a national scale at a time when union leaders, editorial writers and the general public have joined to fault the administration's approach for its lack of muscle. The impact of Dunlop's dealings will inevitably be diminished by a deterioration of confidence.

It seems inevitable that someone high in the administration is going to have to do some jawboning, not against a specific union or industry but against the mood of inflationary expectations which is building up once more. To believe in what Dunlop is doing, the public needs running reminders of the President's determination.

Shortage

As a visitor to your beautiful city of Victoria from the State of California, I have been greatly impressed with the friendliness and courtesy of the people. One particular example of this occurred just the other night when I visited a restaurant. One of the girls (or is it "wenches"?) had lost about $25 and the "minstrel" who was there announced this and asked for a collection, which was quickly made. You can imagine my shock when I discovered afterwards that the money was not hers at all, but was the cost of drinks at a table where the people had walked out without paying!

Is this the normal practice here, for the waitress to have to pay such bills herself? As it happened, it was a relatively small amount but with a large table of heavy drinkers it could easily have been $60 or $70.

Surely it is unfair for the poor waitress to have to take these sorts of risks — especially on a Saturday night when the poor girls are really run off their feet. I asked whether the restaurant ever paid for such losses and was told "they never have and they never would."

I'm sure that if the waitresses were relieved of this worry, they would be even more cheerful than they were, and an even greater asset to the city of Victoria.

Airport

On March 25, 1972, Prime Minister Trudeau said, "If the majority of people living in this area, even if only 51 per cent, didn't want this airport, then we wouldn't proceed with it." He was speaking at Pickering.

Since that time the federal government has proceeded rapidly with the expropriation of lands for a second Toronto International airport at an estimated cost of $600 million (first phase).

A recent poll by Peter Regensstreif of the Toronto Star showed 56 per cent of the people in Metro Toronto were against the airport, 26 per cent were in favor and 18 per cent were not sure. In addition, three-quarters of the elected federal members have stated they are against the second airport. The insistence by the federal government on building an unwanted, unwanted airport can be based on only one proposition — so vast a sum of federal spending will attract votes and support to the Liberal party in an area which is dominated by the Conservatives and NDP. Such boondoggling in this time of national need for houses and other social priorities is an act of political cynicism. — C. M. Godfrey, Box 159, Claremont, Ont.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of May 18, 1913:

PARIS — The Comtesse Metusine, otherwise Mme. de la Rochefoucauld, has just given to the world the result of her researches into a remarkable and entirely new science which she claims to have discovered. Briefly, she can tell from its toes whether a child in the cradle is going to kill its father when it grows up.

Based on the story of Oedipus, a famous parricide, and much investigation, Mme. de la Rochefoucauld has announced that "he who is going to kill his father has a shorter big toe than most other people."

She took her discovery first of all to M. Bertillon, of fingerprint fame, who sent her to the prefect of police, who passed her on to the minister of the Interior, who suggested that she approach M. Bertillon. On learning that this had already been done, the minister hinted vaguely that the president of the republic was a man to whom nothing came amiss. Mme. de la Rochefoucauld set off for the Elysee, and has not been seen since.

The Men at the Top Who Look After Themselves

OTTAWA — Opposition MPs are sniffing at one of Ottawa's startling stories. This is the literally "fantastic" increase, in recent years, in the numbers of government personnel drawing what may be called "executive salaries" and, even more startling, the wonderful generosity in the salary increases themselves. The public tends to bitch about MPs "voting increases for themselves." The mandarins make the MPs seem pikers, without the need for any formal vote.

Only the outline of the story can be given here, and that in rather jerky fashion. Perhaps the best way is to personalize it a bit through one man, the Hon. Charles (Bud) Drury, president of the Treasury Board, the watchdog of the federal purse.

Mr. Drury, of course, is a "silver spoon" type and a former federal deputy minister. His daddy controlled the big, Montreal-based manufacturing complex of Canadian Car and Foundry. Private schools; McGill; post-graduate study abroad; a war-time brigadier; a postwar mandarin; then the co-opting in the days of the Chief into the Liberal Party; a cabinet minister for 10 years; and first minister of the already defunct Ministry of Industry.

DRURY
... silver spoon

Mr. Drury is cool toward—indeed, I think he dislikes—trade unions. My conversations with him (usually abusive) suggest he considers unions, at best, a necessary evil.

Last week, some spokesmen for unions in the public service suggested there should be a government policy that no public servant make less than $5,000 a year.

Mr. Drury is the man in charge of Treasury Board, which, as the Canada Yearbook says, is responsible "for the classification of positions, the rates of pay, conditions of employment and for representing the government in collective bargaining with bargaining agents representing employees in the public service."

By DOUGLAS FISHER

Mr. Drury's response to the $5,000 minimum was so proper. Such was not a matter of policy but one of collective bargaining. A tough customer: Right? Right. The bargaining agents are up against a stern man. In the name of the poor taxpayer, would that Mr. Drury were as tough on his mandarins.

Two MPs have been getting, in dribsles, answers to a series of questions about numbers of employees and salary levels in the public service.

They are Steve Paproski, the bulky, breezy Conservative from Edmonton Centre, and Bill Knight the youngest, fairest flower of the Saskatchewan New Democrats in the House.

Mr. Paproski's questions are the simple ones. For each department he asks the number of employees on Jan. 1, 1963, and Jan. 1, 1973. Then he asks how many at these two dates were making under $10,000 a year: Between $10,000 and $20,000 and above $20,000.

Mr. Knight takes a shorter view. He seeks numbers of employees for Jan. 1, 1970, and Jan. 1, 1973. Then, for the 1970 date, he asks for numbers in each $1,000 level over $15,000 salary a year; and for 1973, he asks the same information for those making a $19,000 salary and up.

Not all the answers are in, but even cursory examination of the two sets of questions as answered confirm what I started in the first paragraph. Startling: Whatever holding of the line Mr. Drury has achieved with the unions which bargain for the lower-rated employees, he has been most generous with executive personnel, especially in his own department, Treasury Board.

A few examples will demonstrate the point.

In the decade from 1963 to 1973, External Affairs swelled from 1,516 employees to 2,751. In 1963, only 13 officers made more than $20,000; in 1973, 284 made over $20,000. In 1963, 327 External Affairs people made over $15,000; in 1973, this figure had jumped to 700.

The Department of Finance, at 548 employees in 1973, is up only 62 people from 1963. A small increase you say. No. In 1963, Finance included Treasury Board which has since split off. In 1963, Finance had only one employee making over $20,000; today it has 80 above that figure.

Mr. Drury's Treasury Board has prospered mightily since 1970. Then, of its 443 employees, 200 made over $15,000, 165 made over $18,000, 124 made over $20,000, 22 made over $25,000, three made over $30,000 and one made over $40,000.

Three years later, 249 made over $18,000, 205 made over $20,000, 104 made over $25,000, nine made over $30,000 and one made over $45,000.

It pays, oh, it pays magnificently, to be one of Mr. Drury's watchdogs.

How did this generosity come about? After all, the majority of these favored ones did not have any official bargaining agent.

The simplest explanation must go back to Mr. Drury's Department of Industry, created in 1963. This new apparatus went out and recruited in private industry. The norms of executive salaries in the public service began to mushroom upward.

Late in the 1960s, Mr. Trudeau began to get advice on executive remuneration from an advisory committee headed by B.C. tycoon J. V. Cline. Since then it's been "deuces wild." The Drury ilk look after themselves.

When is a union bargaining agent unnecessary? When the men at the top appreciate themselves.

U.S. Wants Scapegoat to Absolve Its Sins

Recently the New York Times noted that, once again, the television viewer would be able to watch Gore Vidal's political melodrama The Best Man. Over the years I have become so familiar with this listing that I no longer wonder why I am irritated by it. No longer, that is, until Watergate. I realize now, that my distaste was always with the word "melodrama". The Best Man was first written as a realistic play about two men at a political convention fighting one another for the presidential nomination of their party.

In 1959 when I wrote the play, the Democratic rivals for the nomination were Adlai Stevenson (who was being smeared as a homosexual—and an indecisive one to boot), John F. Kennedy (who was being smeared as an altogether too active heterosexual as well as the glad beneficiary of his wealthy father's ability to buy elections) and the majority leader of the Senate, Lyndon Johnson (who was known to take cash for any political services rendered).

In the background was Harry Truman, whose campaign for election in 1948 nearly ended before it began. Unable to pay for the train in which he was to whistle-stop the country, giving hell to the rich, Truman turned to his crony Louis Johnson and asked for money quick. Johnson got the money from the "China Lobby", and ever after the grateful President loyally served the cause of Chiang Kai-shek. All of this was common knowledge to most of us who were involved in the life and politics of Washington.

Unctuous Man

When I based the character of the wicked candidate in the play on Richard Nixon, I thought it would be amusing if liberal partisans were to smear unjustly that unctuous man as a homosexual. I was promptly condemned by a conservative columnist who said that my plot was absurdly melodramatic since no man could rise to any height in American politics if he were thought to be a fag. Yet this same columnist used to delight in making allusions in print to Stevenson's lack of robustness.

When faced with a moral issue most American commentators simply ignore it—or as Elaine May said to Mike Nichols in one of their skits, "I like a moral issue so much more than a real issue."

Journalists who know quite as much or more than I about American politics seem never able to deal in print with the actual issues raised as opposed to the occasional muck raked. They black out because, well, the institution of the presidency must be preserved while the sanctity of Congress and the Supreme Court... in other words, don't give away the game because we're all in it together, making a pretty good living out of USA Inc.

'Pragmatism'

I wrote a novel—in 1967 called Washington DC. The narrative began in the Roosevelt era and ended as dawn struck the towers of Camelot. I invented two Senators... one oldstyle... one newstyle.

Hoping to be President in 1940, my old Senator raised money by doing the wrong kind of favor for a lobbyist. Since the Senator was essentially a moral man (brought up on the McGuffey reader), he was literally demoralized by his crime, and fell.

The young Senator was very much in the Kennedy tradition and so was able to take without a second thought anything that was not nailed down because that's the way you play the game around here: that's what the word "pragmatism" means. At the end of the book it was fairly plain that he was presidential material.

Across the land there was a chorus of distress from writers of bookchat as well as from political camp-followers. The author was traducing famous and honorable men, not to mention the greatest society the world had ever seen. Why was the writer such a s—? Because, God help us, he was filled with envy! Apparently anyone who criticizes anything or anyone in the land of the free does so because he is envious-proving. I suppose that this peculiar emotion must indeed be a pre-vailing national trait.

J. K. Galbraith wrote one of the few favorable reviews of Washington D.C., but even that lovable old cynic saw fit to admonish me in person. "You know things are not that bad in politics," I looked at him with, as they say in popular fiction, wonder. Surely Ken must have heard the funny story told by a Kennedy relation who, on his way to West Virginia, stopped at a barber's to have his hair cut and then hurried off, leaving behind his bag filled with dollars to be paid to the honest yeomen of West Virginia in exchange for their support of the family's candidate.

Last spring I felt obliged to offer my countrymen yet another glimpse of their masters in a play called An Evening With Richard Nixon. All of Nixon's dialogue in this entertainment was taken from his actual speeches and press conferences. The effect was properly devastating, but, alas, the envious author was found guilty of having, this time, drawn attention to those small lapses which we are taught from childhood to paper over. ("If you can't be good be careful" is an American maxim.) Even the British drama reviewer for the New York Times was shaken by the unfair way I had treated a man whom he referred to with true reverence as "our President."

... decadence

Was it ever thus? Yes, I fear the United States has always been a nation of ongoing hustlers from the prisons and disaster areas of old Europe. Our grand British heritage is now wearing thin, but still can be observed in our racism as well as in the spontaneous hypocrisy with which our public men respond to inconvenient disclosures and the self-serving rhetoric that swirls about them in time of crisis like squid's ink.

The brilliant Alexander Hamilton was almost certainly corrupt during his years at the Treasury—his right-hand man went to jail. Hamilton was also a British secret agent, as was Benjamin Franklin, Jefferson's Commanding General of the American Army, James Wilkinson, a Spanish agent (for political reasons the President protected him and thus condoned treason). Andrew Jackson's appointment of his Tammany friend Sam Swartout to the collectorship of the Port of New York helped undermine the Jacksonian "revolution" (such as it was) because the President's political heir, Van Buren, was brought down, in part, by Swartout's theft of more than $1 million from the port.

'Tea Pot Gore'

Growing up in the Washington house of my grandfather, Senator T. P. Gore of Oklahoma, I was intimately aware of the Tea Pot Dome scandal. My grandfather had once written a brief for one of the oil barons in the case. Although I do not think that my grandfather was on the take (Senator from an oil state, he died poor), he was certainly unwise and for at least one troublesome election he was known irreverently as "Tea Pot Gore."

When the poor but eloquent tribune of the people Senator Borah (the lion of Idaho) died, several hundred thousand dollars were found in his safety deposit box. "He was my friend," said Senator Gore gravely to the press, "I do not speculate."

In private, my grandfather was fairly certain that the money was from Hitler. Borah was a devoted isolationist and not above taking money from those whose interests he would have furthered anyway.

Last year a remarkable book was published in the United States, Washington Pay-Off by Robert N. Winter-Berger. At first hand, the author, a former-lobbyist, described how the Speaker of the House of Representatives, John McCormack, rented space in his Capitol office to a master criminal named Nathan Voloshen. From the Speaker's office a team of influence-peddlers sold favors to innumerable clients. Eventually they were busted by U.S. Attorney Robert Morgenthau. Voloshen went to jail. The Speaker was persuaded to retire from Congress. This horror-story was one of several carefully detailed by Mr. Winter-Berger; each involved some of our most celebrated public men.

Expose Ignored

Needless to say, the book did not please the owners of the United States, a loose consortium that includes the editors of the New York Times and the Washington Post, the television magnates, the Rockefeller, Kennedys, ITT, IBM, etc. Winter-Berger's expose was largely ignored by the press and television. The book did become a best seller but never became what it should have been, a subject for national debate.

Intrigued by the silence the book had aroused, I rang Robert Morgenthau and asked him if he thought Winter-Berger a reliable witness, in the high Whittaker Chambers sense of the word. Morgenthau said that, all in all, the text was accurate. If so, the following scene was drawn from life.

Early in Johnson's reign, the President appears in the Speaker's office. Unaware that Winter-Berger is also in the room, the President denounces his former aide, Bobby Baker, who is under indictment. "John, that son of a bitch is going to ruin me. If that... talks, I'm going to land in jail." Thus, characteristically, spoke the emperor of the West, the scourge of Asia and shield to ungrateful Europe, the sole wielder of the arrows and the laurel.

The Speaker draws Johnson's attention to the covering Winter-Berger. The President wants to know if the witness is "all right." Winter-Berger swears loyalty to his sovereign, and listens raptly as LBJ outlines a plan to stay out of the clink. A message must be got to Baker—"I will give him a million dollars if he takes the rap."

Recently Bobby Baker left prison, and it is said that he, too, may write a book. If he does, I suspect that a quorum of that Senate whose secretary he was may yet convene itself in Lewisburg Federal Penitentiary. For my British readers who are now reeling in disbelief from line to line of this cheery report: yes, we do have laws of libel in the United States, but they are less strict than yours. Even so, the scene with Johnson in the Speaker's office was published while the former president was still alive and capable of bringing action against publisher and author. He did neither.

I have nothing to add to the unfolding scandals of Watergate except to note that what has so far been revealed is only the tip of not an iceberg but a glacier. As a professional political melodramatist, however, I am struck by the tameness of my work. Like Clive, when I consider my opportunities I am impressed by my restraint.

State of Decadence

During the last few days the owners of the United States have been telling us that to preserve the Republic everyone must now support a chastened-Nixon and make it possible for him to govern. Why? To continue the devastation of Cambodia and Laos? The erosion of civil liberties? The stockpiling of redundant arms? The control of wages but not of profits? The curtailment of all programs that might make the poor less desperate?

I cannot for the life of me see the value of continuing this Administration another day in office. More to the point, I do not think that the American system in its present state of decadence is worth preserving.

The initial success of the United States was largely accidental. A rich, almost

empty continent was occupied and exploited by rapacious Europeans who made slaves of Africans and corpses of Indians in the process. They created a Venetian-style republic based on a limited franchise and dedicated to the sacredness of property.

Now the land is no longer rich enough to support the pretensions of the inhabitants. Institutions that once worked well enough for the major stockholders are no longer adequate to bear the burden of all our mistakes.

Yet I am certain that a majority of my countrymen would like things to continue pretty much as they are. If they do, then their only hope is the prompt impeachment and dismissal of this President.

A ritual scapegoat is needed to absolve our sins and Nixon has obligingly put his head on the block. Certainly to allow him to go free makes us all accomplices. It also brings to a swift end the brief, and by the world no doubt unlamented, American imperium.

Tell Us More, Doctor

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN
An Editorial

Too many patients today are being treated by their doctors like Victorian children—expected to be seen, but not to be talked to. This was bad enough in the last century, but in the 1970s when medicine has become so much more complicated the practice cannot continue. Better educated patients have made some inroads on old practices by insisting on more information, but many patients are still content to take part in a deaf and dumb show.

This just may be permissible for surgical patients (because they may have little part to play), but medical patients often have a crucial role in their treatment, controlling their diet, restricting their exercise, and taking medicine.

Surveys suggest, however, that as many as one in three patients fails to take the correct doses of medicine and there is an even higher proportion of defaulters among the chronically ill.

In a lecture to the Royal College of Physicians Dr. Charles Fletcher set out several sensible reforms. A first step is to introduce lessons for doctors on communicating skills. Only one of the commonly used textbooks examined by Dr. Fletcher made any reference to them.

To elicit information from the inarticulate is a skill which is by no means as easy as professional interviewers sometimes make it look. An equally important skill is the art of communicating complicated information in a simple and clear language. The patient who appears not to want to know may only be shy or afraid.

Poor communication is not limited to general practice, it is often worse in hospitals. Diagnosis, treatment, and diet are on most hospital checklists, but how many include two vital items: What has the patient been told? What has the patient understood?

Dr. Fletcher suggests that every hospital should include in each patient's notes a page on which can be recorded the information and advice the patient has received. Among other things this would help reduce the contradictory advice many patients receive—the nurse saying one thing and the doctor another, on diets for example.

But much worse than the contradictions is the silence with which many hospital patients have to contend. It tends to be interpreted in the worst possible way. Even when the situation is serious there are often good reasons for telling the truth. Surveys suggest that most dying patients suspect that they are dying and want to talk about it.

BROWN BROS. ON LANSHARDEdmonton Firm Tells People How

By CAROL KENNEDY

EDMONTON (CP) — A sharp rise in the price of new homes and newspapers in Britain because of soaring timber costs has been forecast by Lord Lonsdale, chairman of the timber growers' organization in England and Wales.

Lonsdale was speaking in Edinburgh on behalf of a campaign to reverse British government proposals limiting production of home-grown timber. Lonsdale pointed out that Britain imports 94 per cent of her timber requirements and said the price of Russian timber has increased by 102 per cent in the last year.

Canadian timber prices also have increased due to the worldwide demand for forest products—Japan now is one of the biggest buyers—plus the effects of a bad West Coast winter in 1971-72 which left British Columbia producers with a low inventory of logs.

A spokesman dealing with timber interests at Canada House in London said costs of specialty woods such as clear fir and cedar may have risen by as much as 100 per cent, but general construction grades had a lesser increase, probably about 60 per cent.

Largely because of lack of supplies and price levels which were considered high last year, Canada currently ranks lowest among the four major timber-producing countries exporting to Britain. The others are the Soviet Union, Finland and Sweden.

With the dramatic rise in Russian prices, however, Canadian timber may appear more competitive than it did in 1972. In that year, total exports of Canadian forestry products to Britain totalled $268.8 million—$80.1 million being the share for newsprint, $48.2 million that for lumber, and $31.9 million the revenue from plywood and veneers.

In his Edinburgh speech, Lord Lonsdale said if the timber content of a new house accounted for 25 per cent of its cost, the level of price increases experienced last year could add about 12 per cent to the housebuyer's bill.

He criticized the government for not taking the dramatic increase in import prices into account when it published a white paper proposing to cut forestry planting to 55,000 acres from 65,000 acres for environmental reasons.

PARENT FIRM SET TO SELL

QUESNEL (CP) — Thomas Willers, president of Champion International, a New York-based multi-national company, says his firm would be prepared to sell part of its 73 per cent ownership of Weldwood of Canada to the Canadian public to allow Weldwood "to expand the way it should."

Willers said in an interview that Weldwood is almost fully grown as an enterprise and now must diversify from forestry into other fields such as land development and retailing.

"I don't think of it as a subsidiary any more," he said.

"Weldwood is literally finishing its phase one."

"Not only is there no objection to divesting shares to the Canadian public, it is almost a must if Weldwood is to expand the way it should."

He also said the United States and Canada should stop arguing over trade matters. "If ever Canada and the U.S. need each other it is now."

Willers was here for the official opening of the Cariboo Pulp and Paper Co. Kraft Mill, equally owned by Weldwood of Canada and Daishowa-Marubeni International Ltd. Weldwood also has a number of other forestry product operations in B.C., including a plywood plant in Vancouver.

North Sea Drilling To Cost $5 Billion

EDMONTON (CP) — The oil industry will spend $5 billion in offshore exploration of the North Sea during the next decade, a Calgary oil analyst predicted Tuesday night.

Ian Doig, an analyst with the Bongard, Leslie and Co. Ltd. investment firm, said Canadian companies would contribute $60 million to North Sea development in the next five years, equal to 60 per cent of all their spending outside Canada. There are 45 listed Canadian companies with North Sea interests, he told the Edmonton branch of the Canadian Oilfield Technical Society.

"From an investment standpoint, the Canadian acreage is well situated to participate in this summer's heavy drilling activity. Presently, 21 exploratory wells are drilling in the North Sea and Canadian companies have acreage immediately adjacent to 12 of those tests."

Doig, a former official of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said more Canadian companies are looking at the North Sea and other foreign oil opportunities because the chance of obtaining a return on exploration investment is increasing outside Canada.

"It is estimated that a commercial North Sea find could be in production within four years. In Canada, it's problematical whether any frontier discoveries will be in production before the end of this decade."

He criticized the federal and provincial governments for "take away" legislation which is "killing industry's incentive."

M-B Combines 3 Departments

VANCOUVER (CP) — Macmillan Bloedel president D. W. Timmis has announced the appointment of J. R. Forrest, who formerly headed the firm's building materials group, to head a new unit combining forestry, logging and building materials departments.

Timmis said the move is aimed at making better use of the forests and at meeting environmental needs.

H. R. Chisholm, formerly logging group vice-president, becomes vice-president of raw material planning and allocation. D. B. Turner, former general manufacturing manager, was appointed logging vice-president.

Taxes Will Destroy Mines—MP

Times Ottawa Bureau
OTTAWA — Tax policies brought about by former finance minister Edgar Benson "will destroy every single Canadian mining company," a Saskatchewan MP said in the House of Commons Thursday.

Alvin Hamilton, MP for Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain, joined Tommy Douglas (NDP) in criticizing the minority Liberal government after energy minister Donald Macdonald tabled a document in the House on mineral policy objectives for Canada. Hamilton predicted that tax reforms would destroy "the small companies within 10 years and the big intricate companies within 30 years when the mines run out."

He said unless there are sensible changes to the tax laws regarding the mining industry its future is hopeless.

"It is going down the drain as surely as the Canadian oil and gas industry went down the drain in the past 30 years because of taxation policies used by federal and provincial governments."

Hamilton said that the New Democrats in particular believed in "front end loading" the mining industry to such a degree that domestic ownership was impossible. Unrealistic tax policies encouraged foreign ownership of the industry when Canadians were crying out for fair taxation policies which promoted Canadian ownership.

Douglas said he agreed with Hamilton that Canada needed a national minerals policy and leadership rather than just another consultative committee, but he said he could never agree that taxes on mining companies should be eased.

"I cannot shed tears over International Nickel Company which has been making hundreds of millions of dollars out of the resources that belong to the people of Canada," said the former premier of Saskatchewan.

"The spokesman for the Progressive Conservative party talks about the poor oil and gas companies going down the drain during the last 10 years. Imperial Oil, after taxes, has made $1 billion during the last 20 years and has paid to the government of Canada royalties of $40 million — or four per cent — of what they pay for the resources of Canada," Douglas said.

The New Democrat said he was glad that the Liberal government had taken a first

"timid" step to set up a consultative machinery, but he said a national minerals policy was desperately needed and so were plans to have more processing done in Canada and better world prices obtained for the nation's resources.

The document, tabled by Macdonald revealed that Ottawa and the provinces will set up a formal consultative and co-ordination mechanism for mineral policy.

Interest Ceiling Rise Considered

Times Ottawa Bureau
OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner suggested in the Commons Thursday the federal government is considering raising the interest ceiling on government guaranteed loans to farmers, fishermen and small businesses.

David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, noted reports that government guaranteed loan money from the chartered banks is drying up in the wake of recent increases in general bank lending rates.

Lewis said this is because the interest rates for farmers, fishermen and small businesses are lower at 6.25 per cent than the prime interest rate of 7 per cent to which the banks now have access.

Lewis suggested the minister should discuss with bankers the possibility of making a certain percentage of capital available to farmers, fishermen and small businessmen at the 7 per cent rate the government has frozen.

PM Plans Inflation Statement

Times Ottawa Bureau
OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau will make a statement on inflation and other economic matters that concern the country when he opens the federal-provincial heads of government conference in Ottawa next Wednesday.

He told the Commons Thursday that it is his intention to make such a statement at the opening of the meeting of the premiers with the prime minister. The three-day conference is expected to feature lengthy discussion on the inflationary pressures at work within the economy and what should be done to combat them.

"This car has reached a technical level close to the limit of what can be done today in standard automobile engineering."

Remarkable as some may think it, the 450SE is being bought almost as rapidly as it can be shipped from Stuttgart. Here are some of the reasons.

1. Even better handling. An entirely new front-suspension proved out on our 180 mph C-111 prototype further minimizes the risk of swerves and skids. The sense of control is uncanny.

2. Fuel-injected engine with electronic fuel metering, transistorized ignition, and disc brakes give this 2-ton sedan the performance of a sports car.

3. Standard fittings include stereo AM/FM radio; superb air-conditioning; anatomically designed seats; 40 lbs of paint, undercoating; central locking system; Mercedes-Benz engineering.

Allstate Must Accept 'Risks'

Highways Minister Bob Strachan said Thursday the only effect of the move by Allstate Insurance Co. to stop writing new policies for car insurance and all other types of insurance in B.C. after May 31 will be a reduction in the amount of commissions paid to insurance agents.

Strachan said Allstate, like all insurance companies, will be in operation in the province until March 1, 1974, the day insurance will be issued by the new government-run Insurance Corporation of B.C.

The companies operating in B.C., under provincial statute, are assigned a certain proportion of their business from the insurance exchange, which is the former assigned risk plan.

Strachan said Allstate, which announced its decision to stop writing new policies Wednesday, will have to handle its share of business from the insurance exchange until March 1, 1974. The amount of business assigned to an individual company by the insurance exchange is proportionate to the percentage of business it did in the B.C. insurance industry the previous year.

B.C. Superintendent of Inurance E. T. Cantell said Allstate did about $6.8 million of auto insurance in the last recorded year, 1971, which represents about five per cent of the total amount of business done, $136 million.

There is a difference in the commission rate paid to agents by individual companies on "over-the-counter" sales and by the insurance exchange itself. Individual companies pay their agents 12½ per cent commission while the insurance exchange pays only 7½ per cent.

If a customer has difficulty getting a policy written by an individual company, he may have his agent refer his policy request to the insurance exchange, which assigns the policy.

Cantell said insurance companies do not have to give notice to him of their intention to stop writing new policies for insurance. But if a company decides to cease sales altogether in the province, it must file written notice, he said.

Of Allstate's decision to stop writing new policies, Cantell said: "I imagine that this will become a trend. The important thing is to keep the current business in force."

Strachan said stories which appeared in the press about the Allstate statement were "completely misleading."

"Allstate must continue to take its share of the exchange business," he said, adding that two other companies which have announced similar decisions, Co-Op and Home, are in the same position.

"It's not a panic situation," the minister said. "The insurance exchange is not even working to capacity right now. No problem."

He advised motorists who are having difficulty finding a company to insure them to "find another agent."

Union Checks CWU Move

TRAIL (CP) — The Canadian Workers Union has failed in an attempt to nominate candidates to run for office in the Trail local of the United Steelworkers of America.

The financial secretary of Local 1 of the CWU, Archie McKinnon, said Thursday an attempt to nominate candidates at a steelworkers meeting here Wednesday night failed because the steelworkers ruled that none of the men the CWU wanted to run had attended the required number of steelworker meetings during the last year.

The CWU is appealing recent ruling by the British Columbia Labor Relations Board denying a certification vote among Continco employees in Trail, Kimberley and Salmo, now represented by the steelworkers.

Picket Plea Made

VANCOUVER (CP) — A top union executive said Thursday removal of picketing restrictions would not lead to indiscriminate picketing in the construction industry.

Jim Kinnaird, president of the B.C. and Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council, said he and fellow officers made this point at a meeting Wednesday with Labor Minister Bill King's special advisers in Vancouver.

The delegation repeated labor's pleas for repeal of the trade-unions act which restricts picketing to the place of business involved in a legal strike.

Spray Protested

BURNABY (CP) — The anti-pollution group SPEC has sent a telegram to B.C. Health Minister Dennis Cocke demanding that the use of phenoxy herbicides be halted. SPEC charged Sperling elementary school ground were sprayed with 2,4-D herbicide while children played in other parts of the grounds.

Fraud Nets Jail

VANCOUVER (CP) — Andrew Dundas, 42, of Vancouver, was sentenced to six months in jail after pleading guilty in provincial court Thursday to defrauding the city's social welfare department of $153 last July.

Penalty: Jail

CLOVERDALE (CP) — Peter Stobbe, 41, was sentenced Wednesday to a year concurrent on each of two charges — having intercourse with a female not his wife and having intercourse with a girl between 14 and 16 years of age. The offences, both involving the same girl, were committed on March 29.

New Indian Problem

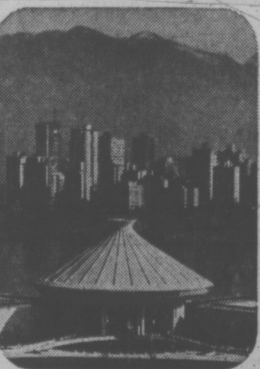

VANCOUVER (CP) — Increasing numbers of Indians are moving to larger centres where they face enormous problems, including prejudice, says Larry Sutton, executive director of the Calgary Indian Friendship Society.

Gov't Spends $10 Million On New Ethnic Programs

OTTAWA (CP) — Seven new and expanded programs designed to stimulate ethnic awareness at a cost of more than $10 million were announced Thursday by Stanley Haidasz, minister responsible for multiculturalism.

Also announced was creation of a Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism comprising spokesmen for different ethnic groups.

Haidasz told the Commons the strengthening of the government's policy of "multiculturalism within a bilingual framework" entails an increase in funds for the program to $10,132,600 in the 1973-74 fiscal year from $4,154,000 in 1972-73.

The new programs include a Canadian identified program designed to increase an awareness on the part of all Canadians of the different lifestyles and cultural traditions within society.

This is to include an annual folk festival as part of the August program of the National Arts Centre in Ottawa and regional festivals in winter.

It also encompasses a competition for plays, in English or French, which reflect some aspects of multiculturalism, publication of a book on Canadian foods, translation of literature about Canada written in "ethnic languages," increased assistance for the National Film Board and travelling exhibits by the National Museum of Man.

The government, meanwhile, was accused in Commons Thursday of delaying true Canadian unity by not carrying out recommendations of the royal commission on bilingualism and multiculturalism fast enough.

Rene Matte, Social Credit member of Quebec's Champlain riding, said that "for far too long this government and this country have shown merely a bilingual facade."

He accused an "exclusively English-speaking establishment" of retarding Canada's progress.

Copernicus Honored Saturday

A plaque commemorating the birth 500 years ago of Copernicus, founder of modern astronomy, will be dedicated Saturday night at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain.

The plaque, a bust of Copernicus, will be presented by Dr. Walter Kazun of the Polish Congress in Vancouver on behalf of the Canadian Polish community and will be unveiled by Judge Alfred Swencisky of Vancouver.

Acceptance on behalf of the National Research Council, which operates the observatory, will be made by Dr. K. O. Wright, observatory director.

Wright noted that Copernicus was the first scientist to argue that the sun and not earth was at the centre of the solar system and, following acceptance of his argument, astronomy has undergone an explosive development which has continued to this day.

The dedication will take place at 7:30 p.m. and following the ceremony there will be a presentation of Polish songs and dances by the ZGODA Polish Association of Vancouver.

Summer Customs Taking Effect

The U.S. customs' summer schedule goes into effect this weekend at Roche Harbor and Friday Harbor on San Juan Island.

On Sundays and U.S. holidays, customs clearance service will be available at both ports of entry from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. for a charge of $3.

Casket Makers Win Pay Boost

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 40 workers at Imperial Casket Co. Ltd., Thursday night ratified a two-year agreement with wage hikes of up to 23 cent plus substantial fringe benefits.

The members of the International Woodworkers of America Vancouver local, who had served 72-hour strike notice, will get a 40-cent hourly raise in each year, union spokesman Doug Evans said.

This will lift the $3.48 base rate to $4.28 next April 8 and the top journeymen's rate to $5.10 an hour.

'TIP-OFF' WAS REAL THING

A "tip-off" with a difference convicted a would-be burglar in provincial court Thursday.

When police stopped 20-year-old Neil Alexander Pollock, 1125 Hillside, on March 2, he was carrying a sheath knife with the tip missing. Pollock said the knife had been broken a month earlier.

The same day, however, Pollock's missing tip was found — embedded in the window of the Menzies Fish and Chip Shop, at 211 Menzies, broken into that day.

Pollock was remanded to June 5 by Judge William Ostler for pre-sentence report on a charge of breaking and entering with intent.

CLC Campaign Confirmed

OTTAWA — The Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) Thursday announced a special drive to offset the threat of all-Canadian unions which are cutting into membership of U.S.-based CLC affiliates, particularly in British Columbia.

News of the special drive had leaked last week from a closed meeting of the CLC, but the congress officers made the campaign explicit Thursday at a news conference ending a three-day meeting of the organization's executive council.

Recently, the U.S.-based International Woodworkers of America lost certification votes in three small sawmills in the Nanaimo-Ladysmith area to the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada.

But Wednesday the IWA scored a key victory over the PPWC in a certification vote among 1,047 workers at the massive Soona sawmill and shingle mill at Port Alberni.

CLC president Donald MacDonald said a 15-member committee of top CLC leaders would plan the campaign to "offset the defections and divisions plaguing us in the last couple of years."

But he denied that the 1.8-million member CLC saw the Canadian Council of Unions (CCU), with less than 20,000 members, as a major threat.

"It (the CCU) hardly warrants all-out war by the CLC," MacDonald said. The breakaways were more of an irritant, he added.

"If you had a mosquito on the end of your nose, wouldn't you try to brush it off?" he said.

The CCU has made a number of successful inroads into membership of some international unions such as the United Steelworkers of America.

MacDonald said the successes of the CCU can be attributed to a number of causes—a strong sense of nationalism in B.C., poor service to members and support from people unsympathetic to unions.

Canadian branches of international unions within the CLC are supposed to conform to minimum standards for national autonomy, and MacDonald said that while he was encouraged with the degree of compliance, the situation was far from perfect.

Pontiac Astre.

A little bigger engine...
a little longer wheelbase...
a little more weight...

yet it's priced about the same as the top-selling imports.

Just like the three top-selling import models, Pontiac's new little Astre comes with a low price tag. But Astre offers you real advantages in some important areas. Look here:

WHEELBASE	97.0 INS.
TRACK FRONT	55.2 INS.
REAR	54.1 INS.
WEIGHT (HATCHBACK)	2395 LBS.
ENGINE DISPLACEMENT	140.0 CU. INS. (2300.0 CC)

It adds up. A 2300 c.c. engine shouldn't have to work as hard as a 1200, 1600 or a 2000 c.c. engine. And if you want a bit more snap a 2-barrel high-output engine option is available on Astre. Both are 2300 c.c. overhead-cam jobs. With either, you can stick with Astre's standard 3-speed manual shift or order a sporty 4-speed or a 3-speed Turbo Hydra-matic. They are all floor-mounted.

As for Astre's longer wheelbase, wider track and heavier weight, the difference is in riding smoothness, in stable cornering, and in the "feel" of the car. These are differences you should check out yourself. Your Pontiac dealer will be only too happy to oblige with a demonstration. Before you buy any small car, put a Pontiac Astre through its paces.

Astre models include the lowest-priced Coupe, a Hatchback (to your left, a convenience not offered by any of the leading imports) and a Safari station wagon, which can

not found in competitive makes. Just ask your dealer. And Pontiac Astre is built only in Canada. Right on!

ICCS 'Got Best Pilots'

By KEVIN DOYLE
SAIGON (CP) — Despite a continuing controversy over the April 7 crash of two peacekeeping helicopters, officials of the four-country peace supervisory force believe they have the best pilots and aircraft available in Southeast Asia.

Col. J. A. (Tex) Mitchell of Winnipeg, officer in charge of all air operations with the International Commission for Control and Supervision (ICCS), says the pilots used on peacekeeping flights are "competent in every respect."

Mitchell, whose family lives in Renfrew, Ont., said in an interview that both the pilots and the aircraft, provided by a firm called Air America, are examined and tested rigorously.

He would not comment on rumors that the pilots involved in the April 7 crash were unfamiliar with the territory which they were flying over when fired on by Communist forces. All nine people aboard one helicopter, including Capt. Charles Laviolette of Quebec City, were killed.

Mitchell stressed that pilots who do not know a particular region are usually taken on a "familiarization flight" before carrying ICCS personnel. If this has not taken place, the pilots are accompanied by people who are familiar with the terrain.

Air America was awarded the ICCS contract by unanimous agreement of the four participating countries, Canada, Hungary, Indonesia and Poland. But not a great deal has been made public about the exact nature of the company. Air America officials here refuse to grant press interviews but sources in Saigon and several published documents provide a broad outline of the firm's background and operations.

On paper, Air America is owned by the Pacific Corporation, a Delaware holding company whose board chairmen have been mainly retired United States military personnel, such as Felix Stump, former U.S. commanding admiral in the Pacific.

The American writer Elaine Shepard, in her best-selling book The Doom Pussy, said Air America is generally regarded as the "stepchild, cousin and brainchild of the American Central Intelligence Agency (CIA)."

It's Undeclared War: Truth Versus Effect

Most newspapermen, asked to give their opinion of public relations types, would agree that they are very nice people; but, of course, you wouldn't want your sister to marry one.

Feeling somewhat that way myself I was doubly perplexed one recent day when, by coincidence, I was offered a public relations job in the morning and, that very same evening, spent three or four hours with a whole bunch of high-pressure image-makers, the very cream of the public relations "industry" in this province.

It's one of the anomalies of the newspaper business that we who do the writing for them get, on average, about half the income that's earned by those whose main job is to try to get things into print.

I don't mind admitting that I had to give it a lot of thought, fully six seconds, before regretfully rejecting the offer that might have changed me from an ink-stained wretch with a mind of his own to a respectable business man with the mind of a corporation.

It was a decision that I thought about a lot later that evening in attending a dinner of the B.C. branch of the Media Club of Canada. This was once the Women's Press Club, made up largely of newspaper women, some of whom I have loved madly for several years. Not a single one of them was at this dinner. Almost all of the membership of the new organization, it turned out, were public relations people.

They are, I hasten to note, a new breed. The old-time public relations man was, more often than not, a huckster intent on protecting his client and manipulating newspapers. It is one of the minor triumphs of the business I love that we weren't to be conned. Now the so-called PR man or woman provides a service that's very often helpful in providing relevant facts or arranging interviews.

The danger they represent is simply that they've an enormous power in shaping public opinion, certainly more power than they or the public seem to realize. The newspaperman is often in the invidious position of turning to them for information and, at the same time, questioning every morsel of information they volunteer, a paranoia that simply did not exist in journalism when you went directly to the source of news without the in-between agent.

There is not a single giant private corporation, not an arm of government, not a public utility, not a commercial enterprise of any size that does not have a public relations representative whose every working hour is spent in making his masters look good.

Every morning when I arrive at work my mail slot is bulging with sophisticated propaganda from school boards, government ministries, book publishers, television networks, chambers of commerce, marketing boards, women's groups, sports enterprises. You name it. The ubiquitous public relations man is everywhere, applying the subtle pressure of his advocacy.

It is not a dishonorable profession. Myself, I'd have lost nothing but a ridiculous vanity in becoming a highly-paid spokesman for an organization with whose purpose I am fully in sympathy. The men and women of this Media Club are sincere, hard-working, loyal to their employers and their employers' aims. Some, in fact, are ex-newspaper people who simply made an arbitrary choice based entirely on the financial rewards.

But it takes no great imagination to see that, unwittingly or not, they pose a serious threat. If the aim of a newspaper is truth, as it ought to be, and the aim of a public relations man is effect, as it appears to be, then the growing power and influence of the image-maker is a frightening thing.

It can be countered only by better, more dedicated newspapermen, but when the newspaper is offering six pence and the corporation is offering the moon — well, they may get your sister, after all.

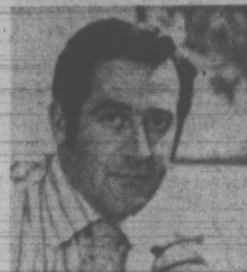

Prison Move Interests Allmand

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand has agreed to consider the request of Metchocin residents who are fighting to get the William Head penitentiary removed to Bentinck Island, just inside Race Rocks.

The Metchocin Ratepayers Association and the Albert Head Ratepayers Association are banding together to get the prison moved to the island.

Allmand phoned MRA chairman John Waterman Thursday night. "He was quite interested in our counter-proposal to have the prison placed on Bentinck Island and the oceanographic institute installed at William Head," Waterman said today. "He's definitely interested, it's giving him an out. He said he didn't realize that the proposed site for the oceanographic institute (Pat Bay) was so close. He thought it was 200 or 300 miles away."

... talked to minister

Allmand has asked that the MRA and AHRA put their submission in writing.

The two groups are circulating a petition and holding a mass meeting in Metchocin Community Hall at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Waterman said he hopes that all residents concerned about the William Head prison, soon to be changed from minimum to medium-security, will attend.

He will also invite a representative from the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, who also want the prison removed from William Head.

Chamber president Terry Farmer says keeping the prison there could lead to a "nasty international incident".

The Pearson College of the Pacific, which will have students from many Pacific Rim countries, will be built at nearby Pedder Bay.

"It (William Head) is definitely going to be a trouble," Farmer said, "if there are similar incidents to the attacks made after the recent escape and if it involved a student or students from other countries."

Farmer sees no promise that increasing security of the prison will cut all risks of escapes.

He bases his lack of confidence in the number of escapas made from medium and maximum-security prisons across the country.

He said the Chamber is convinced that William Head should be moved, not only because of safety to residents and visitors to the area, but because of the value of the land on which it is housed.

"The property is far too valuable," he said, "to be used for a prison."

"I realize we need prisons but they should be placed farther inland. The property would be a perfect site for research into marine technology."

The GVCC has advocated

that the federal government's proposed oceanographic institute should be at William Head instead of Pat Bay.

Manager Brian Small suggested that Allmand and Environment Minister Jack Davis "make a switch" and build the institute at William Head.

TEACH US TO SHOOT!

Residents on Sandgate in Metchocin, where Colin Bowen was attacked Sunday, are planning to get fire-arms and learn how to use them.

"We must protect our families," Ed Phillips, of 5129 Sandgate, said today.

He said he and his neighbors will ask the RCMP for instruction in the use of fire-arms.

Phillips said the penitentiary system has overlooked one potential danger — William Head escapees could arm themselves from the armed forces' Rocky Point depot.

"Rocky Point is not very far away," he said, "and not that well protected by guards."

"There are bombs and all kinds of large and small ammunition there. If one or a couple of these desperate criminals managed to get in there they could lay their hands on an arsenal big enough to threaten Metchocin — the whole of the Greater Victoria area, for that matter."

Pointing out that the Capital Regional District has bought parkland in the area, he wondered who would visit there with "this kind of threat hanging over them."

Parks Ordering Tough Action On Rowdyism

Vandalism and rowdyism won't stand a chance in provincial campgrounds at the weekend.

Alan McFarland, assistant supervisor at Goldstream, said today regulations will be enforced.

"Gangs of youths between 14 and 17 years of age cut trees, smashed tables and removed signs over the Easter weekend. We don't want this to happen again," he said.

Only registered campers will be allowed inside provincial camps after 11 p.m.

Campsite occupancy is limited to four persons and two vehicles. This does not apply to a family group or of two families, providing the site is large enough to accommodate them.

Driving around campgrounds will not be allowed.

Visitors will be asked to leave their cars at the gate and to walk unless they are elderly or have children.

Provincial parks director Bob Ahrens said the branch does not like to tighten its park regulations, "but the behavior of unsupervised high school groups over the Easter weekend left much to be desired."

"It's a difficult problem. If parental concern for their children is lacking, something must be done to prevent a minority spoiling things for others."

"Some of our parks supervisors report that some parents even drop off young children between 10 and 14 years and then go away expecting our park staffs to act as baby sitters," he said.

Meanwhile, weather with both cloud and sunny periods is the outlook for the weekend.

The Victoria area is expected to cloud over tonight and become sunny again by Saturday afternoon. There is the chance of a few showers early Saturday morning.

Temperatures today and Saturday are expected to range between the low 60s and high 40s.

MONEYBAGS filled with $11,700 in nickels, dimes and quarters came in handy after Jaycee fair organizers ran out of change Thursday. The 20 pounds of money was flown in from Vancouver and finance committee chairman Glyn Williams says committee members started rolling the 37 bags of coins this morning. Paid fair attendance up to Thursday night was 93,814, compared to 82,211 at the same time last year.

Patients, Not Experts, to Decide

By SUSAN RUTTAN

Art expert opinions will carry no weight in Gorge Road Hospital's decision whether or not to obliterate the controversial murals in its new wing, hospital administrator Bill Morrison said today.

"If the murals are offensive to the patients it doesn't matter what artists think," Morrison said.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson suggested Thursday that independent and unbiased experts from the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria judge the murals before steps are taken to paint over them.

Morrison said he would be interested in hearing the comments of experts, but they would not affect his decision.

He has said that one and possibly more of the four murals in each of the new wing's dining rooms will be obliterated when artist Luis Merino has finished them.

"It's not for general consumption, it's for the patients," he said of the murals. "We're interested basically in how the paintings affect the patients."

Colin Graham, art gallery director, will see the murals Monday.

Irene Warren, chairman of the board of directors of the Gorge Hospital, supported Morrison's decision.

"We are concerned with one thing only, and that is the patients," she said.

"If something bothers them then we have to take a good look at it."

Warren said she thought a painting of "a lovely river, quiet stream" would have done more to brighten patients' lives than Merino's semi-abstract murals.

Merino has been working on the murals, four in the dining rooms and one in the foyer to the building's back entrance, since February.

He is financed by a $12,000 Local Initiatives Project grant which he shares with sculptor Jose Polutnik.

Hummel Again Faces Income Tax Charges

B.C. Supreme Court has ordered former Victoria lawyer-businessman David Hummel to face charges of income tax evasion before a provincial court judge.

Hummel was charged Feb. 25, 1971, with evading payment of taxes between Jan. 1, 1965 and April 30, 1969, on income of $127,921.93.

He was also charged with four counts of making "false or deceptive" statements on his income tax returns.

After eight days of testimony before provincial court Judge E. F. N. Robinson, the charges were dismissed on the grounds that the Crown had failed to prove "mens rea" — guilty intent to commit the offences.

The Crown, represented by D. M. Gordon and Robert Hutchison, appealed Robinson's decision April 16 and 17 of this year, before Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton of B.C. Supreme Court.

Wootton allowed the appeal and ordered the case be re-mitted to the provincial court for completion.

In his reasons Wootton said Hummel's lawyer, J. E. Spencer, made his motion for dismissal before declaring whether or not he would tender any evidence on behalf of Hummel.

"Mr. Spencer's motion was something that could only be established upon review of the whole case, as it would have been concluded before presentation to a jury," said Wootton.

He ruled that Robinson should have refused to hear the motion until Spencer had elected to call or not to call evidence in Hummel's defence.

"If that had been done, the case would have been in a position to be determined by the court," said Wootton.

Hummel is allowed 30 days to appeal Wootton's decision. No date will be set for trial until the 30-day appeal period has elapsed.

Ask the Times

Q. Who was the first person to die and be buried in Victoria and was the burial in Pioneer Square?

A. The first recorded burial is that of Charles Ross, the first commander of Fort Victoria. He died in 1844 and was buried in the "burial grounds" located in a ravine at the corner of Douglas and Johnson Streets. These graves were later moved to Pioneer Square on Quadra.

Q. What is the address of the Canada Games Lottery?

A. The address is 1973 Canada Summer Games Lottery, 810 Royal Avenue, New Westminster, B.C.

Alcoholism Centre Opening Soon

A mid-July start is expected for B.C.'s first privately-run care centre for alcoholism.

The $1.5 million project on the north slope of Mt. Newton in North Saanich could be operational before the end of the year, said J. George Strachan, president of Gillian Manor Ltd.

Farmer Construction Ltd. has been awarded a contract for the project, designed by architects Siddall, Dennis and Warner, for the 100-acre site on McTavish Road.

The closest similar projects are Donwood Foundation in Toronto, and Collingwood Acres in Edmonton, Strachan said.

Gillian Manor will run independently of B.C. Hospital Insurance Service or government assistance, he said.

Rates will be $35-$50 a day, all found, depending on whether single or double accommodation is taken.

Strachan, himself a recovered alcoholic with 28 years' experience in studying alcoholism treatment, said the average length of stay in such an institution is 21-28 days.

Early referrals by management and the professions achieve a 50-80 per cent recovery rate, he said.

The centre will offer individual and group therapy, after-care and follow-up services. Up to 65 patients may be accommodated on a live-in basis.

Western Canada is reported to have 200,000 alcoholics, up from 63,980 in 1954.

"In most areas," Strachan said, "the dependency on drug alcohol is at least 10 times more serious, with higher incidence of dependency, higher death rate and cost factor than all other drug dependencies together."

Today's average alcoholic is

40, with two children and two cars, one in three being a woman compared with one in five in recent years.

Alcoholism treatment is hindered, Strachan said, by the fact that fewer than 2 per cent of doctors are willing to accept problem drinkers as patients and many hospitals will not admit them.

At Gillian Manor, alcoholics will be treated within the framework of community and family and be encouraged to take part in Alcoholics Anonymous.

Stable and recovered alcoholics will form part of the staff, Strachan said.

UNION CENTRE TO EXPAND

Shareholders of the Victoria Building Co-Operative Union voted approval Thursday night for a $200,000 expansion of the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra.

The plan is to extend the second floor over the Quadra Street parking lot, union secretary Larry Ryan said today.

This would provide an extra 8,000 square feet for offices and meeting halls.

"We are hoping for occupancy early next year," he said.

Speaking of No. 1, Maccs Want That Cup

The question of who's No. 1 keeps cropping up from time to time. Bob Reid is the latest to offer an interesting opinion, even if it was slightly tongue-in-cheek.

Reid is the major domo of McDonalds, this city's entry in the Pacific Lacrosse League (that's what the letterhead says), but is probably better known as simply "Junior A".

It was "meet McDonalds night" at Peakare Arena Wednesday—the team was on show, so were the directors, and everybody got to talk to Wally Donaldson, the new commissioner.

Reid put the ball in his stick right at the start when he said: "We may not be No. 1 in lacrosse (this was obviously in deference to the senior Shamrocks), but our expenses are just the same as theirs."

If that was only a come-on, then he tossed the bone: "The Minto Cup final is in the West this year, and we're shooting for it. I make no bones about it."

Which would make McDonalds No. 1 Right?

But first there is the small matter of a 24-game league schedule "in what has to be the best-balanced league I've ever seen," confided Donaldson.

Further, Donaldson said: "I feel every club has a shot at first place."

One, Two in Whatever Order

Later he relented and admitted that perhaps if he had to be biased he would pick Richmond and Victoria in whatever order, which is just about what it was last year when McDonalds, in their Junior A debut, finished just three points out of first place.

Richmond, of course, went on to the Minto Cup final, which they lost after having won the championship the previous year. McDonalds, it should be noted, were Canadian Junior "B" champs in 1971. So the battle lines should be well drawn between these two clubs.

McDonalds got full marks from the Commissioner too for their one-sided win over Burnaby (14-2) last Sunday.

"I don't think I've ever seen a goalkeeper play any better than John Hamilton," he enthused. "He played a perfect game."

Hamilton? There's that No. 1 again. He was the league's top goalkeeper in 1972, and a first team all star.

Want another from McDonalds? Take Jim Lynch. He was not only the league's top rookie, and an all-star, but he won the scoring championship, 41 goals and 60 assists for 101 points.

This is year "nine" for coach Bill Munro, and "I think this is easily the best team I've ever had," he said. "It's well balanced, and has good spirit."

These Are the Workers

Just to make certain the club stays that way, Bill has surrounded himself with some others who have been up around that No. 1 spot before.

Barry Forbes, once a goalkeeper with the Shamrocks, and a good one, is assistant coach; Ralph Baker, who had a hand in the Shamrocks' beginning, is a director, and another ex-manager of the Irish lending his experience, is Hector McNeill.

The newest aide is a coup in itself, the littlest Shamrock of all time, the now retired Nirmal Dillon.

But sure, nobody's certain how things will work out. McDonalds appear stronger. They have Glen Neuman, Jerry Kuskaski, Andre Reid, Norm Baker, Jeevan Dillon, Mike Walsh, Mike Yager, Bill Robertson and Dan Green returning, and they have six rookies.

In Wally Donaldson, the league has a head man who wants to be told if he is doing his job badly; until then he would like it known it is his plan to upgrade the league's image to the extent "It is the best entertainment package there is."

On that he will be judged. And it all sounded great, until a glance at the Shamrock lineup showed Norm Baker listed at 195 pounds. Now, this is not right.

Certainly Norm looked slimmer, but still the question had to be put.

Norm answered it quickly enough. "Last year I played at 225," he admitted. "I went up to 235, and now I'm down to 210. They put the 195 in to get me to try and match it."

If he does that could be the No. 1 story of the year. After the Minto Cup, that is.

Dan Sikes Tops Memphis Event

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Veteran Dan Sikes played the part-five holes four-under-par and shot a 67 to take the first-round lead Thursday in the $175,000 Denny Thomas-Memphis golf classic.

The 42-year-old Sikes had a one-stroke margin over long-shot Nor Cerrudo and Dave Hill. Hill played the front nine in a course record of 31, five under par.

Hill chipped in once and needed only 11 putts and appeared ready to make a rout of it. But he bogeyed three times in a five-hole stretch coming home.

Defending titleholder Lee Trevino was four strokes back, managing a 71, and said:

Esquimalt Tops Saanich

Esquimalt Teamsters downed Saanich Charrman Pacific Realty 12-5 Thursday at Esquimalt Sports Centre to pad a winning streak to three games in the Vancouver Island Intermediate "A" Lacrosse League.

Rick Lapointe led Teamsters with three goals while Ross McKinstry and Darrell Deane fired two goals each. Singles were contributed by Brian McKinnon, Dale Roberts, Rick Leggett, Gordie Phillips and Steve Buckley.

Wes Zapotichny, Al McLaren, Steve Hepburn, Pete McCreesh and Mike Hardy replied for Saanich.

Fair to Middlin' Catch Awaits Salmon Fishermen

Salmon fishing is fair to middlin' around most Vancouver Island waters but trout anglers are faced with a topsy-turvy situation for the holiday weekend.

Ten out of the 12 boats working Finlayson arm waters Wednesday night came back with a mixed catch of blues and jack springs along with the odd larger spring.

May Hall reports the fishing is "better than average" but by no means as good as two weeks ago.

Bamberton and Willis Point are providing the main return (all jacks) in the middle portion of Saanich Inlet. Use deeply-trotted small spoons or strip for best success.

Hank Bird reports a concentration of prawns off Pat Bay and some jacks and springs up to 20 pounds have been taken near the navy buoys as well as the Deep Cove marker and Whiskey Point.

Trial Island, Fiddle Reef and The Gap off Oak Bay are yielding jacks and springs from eight to 15 pounds on hootchies, strip and minnow.

Fishermen working the kelp bed off Bentinck Island and to a lesser extent off William Head are picking up springs as heavy as 28 pounds on strip and minnow.

Blues may be taken right on the surface "just about anywhere in Becher Bay" and a few springs are lurking near Beechey Head and Church Rock.

Gerhardt Hansen of Sooke recently connected with two nice springs weighing 31:10 and 17 pounds off Possession Point although Secretary Island has been the main source of success. Use hootchies or minnows and about two pounds of weight.

Mochoers working near Burial Island and trollers fishing deep waters off Bold Bluff, Tent Island and Portlier Pass are coming home with good catches of springs.

Farther north, big springs are being caught off Schooner Cove while blues are sparking more than a little interest near Five Fingers, the White Buoy and Grey Rocks.

Springs are scattered off Campbell River but returns are good if they can be found. Blues are coming in from waters between April Point and Cape Mudge as well as from the Lighthouse to the Red Buoy.

Trout anglers who were on the water when warm weather triggered a massive hatch of black ants throughout much of the Island earlier this week experienced fantastic fishing.

But now the feeding frenzy has died down for a while because the trout are literally "stuffed to the gills."

However, good returns are still noted from a few lakes — Wild Deer, Cowichan, Westwood, Second, Sproat, Great Central, Upper Campbell and Buttle.

NIBBLES: Every salmon weighed in won a prize in the annual Membership Derby of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association last Sunday. . . . Bob Redgrave took top prize of $15 and because he was a member of the VSIAA collected a trophy. . . . His 15-02 pounder was taken in Pat Bay. . . .

Following in order were: John Rose (14:13, Goldstream), Ed Cadillac (14:03, Goldstream), Al Miller (12:08, Pat Bay), W. T. Rice (9:04, Deep Cove), Eric Grant (7:15, Deep Cove), Ada Smith (7:05, Goldstream), Doris Smith (5:08, Goldstream) and Frank Jenvey (3:08, Coles Bay).

Chinook Club members of the VSIAA are reminded of the month Sunburn Derby from dawn to 2 p.m. Sunday.

Early reports from commercial fishermen working the west coast of Vancouver Island indicate a fantastic run of coho will be soon available to sports fishermen.

Nine Words Help Sutton Stay

Nine words, backed up with all the authority of a 61-year-old baseball manager, were enough to snap Dodger pitcher Don Sutton out of a dangerous situation Thursday.

Cincinnati Reds had loaded the bases off Sutton in the first inning on a double by Pete Rose, a walk, a wild pitch and another walk.

Then Los Angeles manager Walter Alston marched to the mound and said simply: "How many innings do you want to go today?"

"I got the message," said Sutton.

He pitched his way out of the jam by getting Richie Scheinblum on a fly ball, then settled down to hurl a five-hitter, retiring 16 consecutive batters in one stretch before leaving the game for a pinch hitter in the ninth. In that inning the Dodgers rallied with three runs for a 3-1 National League victory.

Elsewhere in the league, St. Louis Cardinals topped Chicago Cubs 6-4 in another day game, Pittsburgh Pirates beat Philadelphia Phillies 5-4 and Houston Astros edged Atlanta Braves 2-1 in night action. The New York Mets' game at Montreal was postponed because of rain and cold weather.

It was the second straight game in which the Dodgers rallied in the late going to beat Cincinnati. They topped the Reds 8-6 in 11 innings Wednesday night.

The Pirates sent Steve Carl-ton to his fourth consecutive defeat by scoring three runs in the seventh inning to break a 2-2 tie. One came in on an error by Philadelphia's rookie third baseman, Mike Schmidt, and two scored on Dave Cash's double.

Carlton, who won 27 games and the Cy Young Award last year, is now 4-6 on the season.

In the American League, Cleveland catcher Dave Duncan's ninth-inning home run spoiled Baltimore pitcher Jim Palmer's search for a third straight shutout, but the Orioles rang up a 4-1 victory over the Indians. Palmer's scoreless streak ended at 26¹/₂ innings.

Elsewhere, knuckleballer Wilbur Wood won his ninth game of the season as Chicago White Sox edged Minnesota Twins 5-4; Kansas City Royals ended a four-game skid by clubbing the Texas Rangers 6-1; New York Yankees rallied for two runs in the ninth and two more in the 11th to beat Milwaukee Brewers 4-2; Tony Taylor's home run and Jim Perry's six-hitter carried Detroit Tigers to a 1-0 shutout over Boston Red Sox, and Jim (Catfish) Hunter's five-hitter gave Oakland Athletics a 4-0 victory over California Angels.

The Angels lost the services of outfielder Bobby Valentine, who smashed into the centre field fence while pursuing Dick Green's home run and suffered a broken right leg. He is expected to be sidelined for at least three months.

Polz Does It All For Century Inn

Bill Polz put everything together in just the right way Thursday to power Century Inn to a 3-0 shutout over Six Mile House in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Central Park.

In the other game at Heywood Avenue Park, Seaboard Construction lashed out with 11 hits to tumble Labatts, 10-1.

Polz struck out 15 batters and allowed only one walk while pitching the one-hit victory. He also helped at bat by connecting for a two-run homer in the second inning.

Keith Heppall singled in Mike Cox for the other Century Inn run in the fourth frame.

Leadoff batter Doug Greger spoiled Polz' no-hitter with a single in the sixth inning.

Bob Lowe led the Seaboard hitting barrage with three hits, including a solo homer in the first inning. He scored twice and drove in four runs.

Glen Bullen picked up the win by striking out 17 batters, allowing three bases-on-balls and scattering four hits.

Orr Top Defenceman Sixth Straight Year

MONTREAL (UPI) — Bobby Orr, who started the National Hockey League season on the sidelines recovering from a knee injury, today was named the winner of the James Norris Memorial Trophy for a record sixth consecutive year.

Orr's selection as the league's outstanding defenceman thus added another unique accomplishment to his list of records as he became the first player in NHL history to win any individual award six consecutive times.

Jacques Plante, a teammate of Orr's on Boston Bruins for the final weeks of the 1972-73 season, won the Vezina Trophy five years in a row, from 1956 through 1960, while a goaltender for Montreal Canadiens.

Orr collected 224 of a possible 240 points in the balloting conducted among members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association in the 16 league cities. Points were awarded on a basis of five for a first-place vote, three for a second place and one for a third.

Guy LaPointe of the Stanley Cup-champion Canadiens was second with 58 points, and tied for third place with 36 points each were Bill White of Chicago Black Hawks and Brad Park of New York Rangers.

Clemency Granted

DACC (AP) — The Bangladesh government said Wednesday it is prepared to free an unspecified number of the 50,000 prisoners held since last year's liberation war with Pakistan. Bangladesh, formerly East Pakistan, said it would grant clemency for prisoners accused of collaboration with Pakistani forces if the prisoners promised good behavior and loyalty to Bangladesh. Those charged with murder, rape or "waging war against Bangladesh" will not be freed.

Accent On Relaxing, Not Racing

With a holiday weekend coming up the accent will be on relaxing excursions on the boating scene, rather than racing.

One notable exception will be the Canadian championship regatta for Cal 29 sloops.

A five-race series, to be sailed off the Dallas Road area, is due to get under way 10 a.m. Sunday.

It is hoped to get three races in Sunday and the remaining two, Monday.

Between 30 to 35 boats of the Victoria Cruising Club will head for Scott's Point on Salt Spring Island.

While most of them will tie up there Saturday evening, the remainder will make it in time for the annual sailpast, to take place at 11 a.m. Sunday. Commodore Al Smith will take the salute in his Belle Fille.

Formality over, members and their friends will go ashore for a fried chicken picnic being organized by Elva Callbeck and her committee.

It will be a free and easy weekend for those of the Victoria Canoe Club spending the weekend at Hobbiton Lake.

Ian Muir is organizing this one. He and his party headed for the lake this morning. Camping overnight, they plan to leave the Nob Point picnic site on the north side of Nitinat Lake Saturday morning.

Ian has taken his camera along hoping to get a picture of the osprey nest he saw when he was on Hobbiton Lake last year.

Thirty-six boats turned out for the long-distance race sailed by the Canoe Bay Sailing Club on Sunday.

Jack Lucas' Calamity was well up with the lead boats until she ran aground off Sidney Spit.

Jack managed to get her free and finish the race with no other damage than a pair of soaked pants.

Peter White's White Squall was the over-all winner, beating out Bud Peetz's Saki, Gordie Inglis' Water Melon, Doug McCartney's Nirvana, Will Jensen's Tlara, Colm Hogan's Melda, Jack Smith's Island Challenger, Willi Fahning's Lille Baelt, Bert Buchanan's Lairig Ghru and John Barker's Crown 23.

Royal Victoria Yacht Club keel boats had a race across the Strait of Juan de Fuca to Dungeness and back on Sunday.

Guy Screech's Morgan was top boat in the International Offshore Rule section. In second spot was Fred Gardner's Tringa.

Tom Loney's Baccara was first of the boats racing under the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet rating.

About 30 boats competed in R.V.Y.S.'s around-Discovery-Island race Saturday. It was won by John Nelson's Kaya. First home after her were Walter Roots' Morning Calm, Gerry Howell-Jones' Sian and Cecil Miles' Ixta.

Competition was keen for Wednesday night series racing at Caddboro Bay.

Steve Merriman's Vandal was the winner in the 16-boat PHRF fleet, easing out Sian, Jack Egster's Arrow and Gordie Vickery's Valhalla.

Other results were: — Cal 20s, 1, Nancy Lovett's Red Baron; 2, Dick Readshaw's Massalia; 3, Michael Smith's Kittiwake.

Crown 23s, Bud Brooks' Golden Rod; Thunderbirds-1, Don Taylor's Sundance; 2, Rod McBride's Lemolo and 3, John Malleon's Sunday.

Series racing will be held again Wednesday at 6:30 p.m.

Those of the RVYC keel boats that are not being readied for the Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca classes next weekend will head for Bedwell Saturday for a combination of racing and fun.

Beginning at 10 a.m. they'll race to the popular south Pender resort. The race over, there will be plenty of time left for the usual holiday festivities.

Tennis Tournament Winds Up on Sunday

One final will be played Saturday and the rest Sunday when the adult part of the Victoria-area B.C. Festival of Sports tennis tournament winds up this weekend.

Nancy Hill and Vivian Davies meet Pat Nicholl and Rene Palmgren in the women's doubles final at the Victoria Racquet Club at 12:30 p.m. Saturday. Men's and women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles finals are all set for Sunday.

Winners and runners-up qualify for the Vancouver Island finals in Nanaimo May 26-27 and from there winners go on to the provincial tourney in Tsawwassen June 8, 9 and 10.

In conjunction with the adult tourney, an Island junior (under-18) competition is being staged Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the Racquet Club. Winners of each event go directly to the Tsawwassen junior contest.

POLICE TO CURB GAMBLING CHILDREN

Games-of-chance operators at the Jaycee Fair will be asked by city police not to allow children to use their gambling booths.

The need for action to prevent youthful gambling was raised Thursday by city council's Group A committee, with aldermen saying they had received numerous complaints on the matter.

Later, Victoria Jaycees officials expressed their willingness to co-operate with game operators in ending the underage dice rolling, wheel spinning and other forms of gambling.

Big Lobby By Co-Ops

By NICK KOTZ
Washington Post

Three giant dairy co-operatives, which gave President Nixon $422,500 in controversial campaign gifts last year, also lavishly contributed to congressional races — often backing both sides to insure themselves a winner.

Campaign spending records and interviews with officials who have both received and turned down the co-ops' money, reveal these features of how the co-ops spent more than $2 million on state and federal races last year:

—The co-ops often backed both candidates in congressional, senate and gubernatorial races and then when the election was over, channeled more money to the victor.

—The co-ops backed winners after the election if their original choice was defeated.

—The co-ops concentrated their attention on senior members in key committees of Congress with jurisdiction over the price of milk, price supports, import laws and anti-trust issues, matters in which the co-ops now are embroiled.

—The co-op gifts to individual members of Congress sometimes are disguised in the public record, with the money listed as going to Republican or Democratic Senate and House campaign committees.

—The co-ops gifts have been turned down by at least one member of Congress, Rep. Wiley Mayne, who said he felt "a quid pro quo" was sought and that he could not accept the co-op money when he faced a vote on dairy price supports, which the co-ops want increased.

The three co-ops have continued making contributions this year from unspent funds totalling more than $1.2 million. The contributions sometimes are co-ordinated by their congressional lobbyist, Lynn Stalbaum, a former Democratic congressman from Wisconsin.

Seek Higher Support Prices

The three co-ops — Associated Milk Producers, Inc., Mid-America Dairymen, Inc., and Dairy Men, Inc. — now are lobbying Congress jointly for higher federal milk price supports and legislation strengthening dairy co-ops.

In 1971-72, the co-ops collectively gave $422,500 to the re-election finance committee for President Nixon. Consumer groups have charged in a law suit that the contributions were given after the Nixon administration reversed an earlier decision and raised milk price supports in 1971.

One example of the co-ops' pattern of giving until they find a winner was illustrated by last year's contest for governor of Missouri.

Mid-America, which has its headquarters in Springfield, Mo., initially gave $5,000 each to two Democratic candidates, Edward Dowd and Lt. Gov. William Morris. Mid-America and Dairymen, Inc. gave $11,000 each to Republican candidates Gene McNary and Christopher "Kit" Bond. After the primary, the co-op gave $15,000 to Democrat Dowd and nothing to his opponent Bond. However, three months after Bond scored an upset victory over Dowd, he received $5,000 from Mid-America's campaign funds.

The co-ops, who face several antitrust suits, have shown a recent interest in contributing to members of the house judiciary committee.

Rep. Peter Rodino (D-N.J.), chairman of the House judiciary committee, received $4,000 last October and November after the defeat of another Congressman assured that Rodino would become chairman. Sen. James Eastland (D-Miss.), chairman of the Senate judiciary committee and also a member of the agriculture committee, received $15,000.

The full extent of the dairy co-ops' contributions to individual Congressmen is not a matter of public record since some contributions were channeled through national Republican or Democratic campaign committees. About $600,000 in dairy co-op contributions were given to the Senate and House campaign committees of both parties.

Ed Terrar, director of finance for the Republican congressional committee, said there were instances in which Congressmen told him that they had had money channeled to them through the milk co-ops. In these cases, Terrar said, he gave the official campaign contribution records would only show a gift from the co-op to the campaign committee.

"What are you going to do," he said, "when a congressman calls you up and says he's got so much money coming from some group?"

Terrar said he sometimes would call both Mid-America and Associated Milk Producers to help candidates "because I knew they had a hell of a lot of money."

He said a casual inquiry he made just before the election produced a $125,000 campaign gift from Associated Milk.

MARYLAND FUGITIVES CAUGHT NAPPING

WELCH, W. Va. (UPI)—Heavily armed state police today captured three Maryland fugitives wanted in connection with the slaying of six members of a prominent Georgia farm family.

Police said the three were taken into custody in a rugged Appalachian Mountain region in an area known as Murphy's Cove near the community of War in the southern West Virginia soft coal fields.

They were sleeping when found. Captured were Wayne Coleman, 26, and his half brothers, Carl Isaacs, 19, and William Isaacs, 15. The fourth suspect, George Dunfee, 35, Baltimore, was captured Thursday.

The four had escaped from a prison work camp in Wilcomico County, Md., last May 5.

U.S. Again Delays Skylab Repair Mission

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—Astronauts and engineers worked today to perfect equipment and procedures for flying a dramatic repair mission to the overheated Skylab space station next Friday.

The idea is to carry two 400-square-foot silver sunshades to the orbiting lab and erect one of them to protect the vehicle from the sun.

Officials reported a flurry of activity at space agency centres and contractor plants as various sunshade proposals were developed and tested and the Skylab 1 astronauts practised rigging them in clumsy space suits with stiff fingers.

A space walk will be required to install the device.

Flight controllers reported today that except for the high heat and a minor gyroscope problem, the house-size laboratory was in excellent condition.

The major problem was created when a thermal shield ripped off the Skylab, enabling the outer skin to absorb the sun's rays and heat the interior of the vehicle so that it was uninhabitable.

Flight controllers were able to stabilize the heat at 105 degrees.

The sails are awning-like sun shades which experts are developing and which the astronauts will carry as they fly to a linkup with the 85-ton Skylab 272 miles above the earth.

They will take two types of shades and decide which would be the easiest to install after they reach the station and inspect it during a fly-around manoeuvre.

Disher said that, if possible, the astronauts will attempt to place a shade by manoeuvring the Apollo ferry ship within 10 feet of the Skylab and have one of the crew lean out the open hatch.

Using a long pole with a shepherd's crook on the end, he would attach streamers from a parachute-like bag to two points at the base of the lab. Conrad then would fly slowly to a point atop a telescope mount near the front of the big vehicle for another attachment.

A jerk of a streamer would unfurl the sail, an isosceles trapezoid with two sides 20 feet long and with one end measuring 20 feet and the other 10 feet.

A common sense guide to investing #5

How to invest now for early retirement

Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities shows you how to tailor your own pension plan or add to the one you have, set your own retirement date, and save tax dollars into the bargain.

RETIREMENT at 55, for example, may or may not be for you. But retirement is in your future.

And no matter what you earn today, you're going to need more, in actual dollars, to live at your present standard in 10, 20, or 30 years from now.

While you'll probably receive government pension benefits, and an income from your present company pension plan, neither of these sources of retirement income is likely to offer the flexibility you need to retire when you want, or the extra dollars to retire early.

So how do you provide for those extra dollars to supplement your pension and allow you to retire when you want?

You start now. You set aside extra dollars. You invest them in the stock market. You reinvest their earnings. You aim for an 8%-10% growth rate. And once embarked on your early retirement investment plan, you stick with it.

Then, when you're ready to retire, you buy an annuity and use the monthly payments to supplement your income.

But how much should you invest? Where should you invest: in stocks, bonds, or mutual funds? How long will it take to build the nest-egg you'll need to retire on?

These are questions your Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities account executive can help you answer. But before he does he'll ask you a lot of questions.

How old are you now?

If you're 30 now, 55 is a full quarter of a century away.

But if you're 45, you have just ten years to build toward the income you'll want to retire at 55. Chances are you'll go about building that income quite differently from a 30-year-old. After all, 8%-10% compounded over 25 years grows much more than it does over 10 years.

Of course not all investments you can make show that kind of return. As with any investment, the rate of return is generally proportionate to the risk taken.

So your age now is important. It helps determine the kind of investment portfolio that will come closest to meeting your retirement needs.

How much do you need to retire on?

One man's necessity is another's luxury. No one can tell you how much you'll need when you retire. You have to decide that for yourself. Here's how.

Use the table provided (right) and start with the age at which you want to retire, the number of years between now and then, and your current annual salary.

Subtract all the expenses you're not likely to have once you retire: expenses like the mortgage, the children's upkeep, and education costs. Whatever you have left (item [3]) is a rough estimate of the income you'll need when you retire—except for inflation.

Inflation Index

Assuming a 3% per year rate of inflation, and compounding this:

In 5 years the index is 1.1593
In 10 years the index is 1.3439
In 15 years the index is 1.5580
In 20 years the index is 1.8061
In 25 years the index is 2.0937

In the last 20 years, inflation has averaged over 3% per annum. In the next 20 years it could be lower, but it could also be higher. So multiply the income you think you'll need by the appropriate figure in the Inflation Index above.

Now you know roughly how much you'll need to live on during your first year of retirement (item [4]). Because the above table is a simple one, the figure you come up with will only be an estimate.

There are bound to be other things you'll want to consider. You should talk to your Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities account executive about them. He'll help you work out a personal retirement plan. He'll be able to tell you about the different kinds of annuities available, and help you decrease the bite of inflation even further.

How much will your existing pension plan give you?

Most Canadians are eligible for the Canada Pension Plan. Right now this pays up to a maximum of $81.17 each month from age 65. The basic Old Age Pension is $100 a month now. Both could be higher when you retire.

You can't take either the Canada Pension Plan or the Old Age Pension before 65. But don't forget them in your figuring. The dollars they pay represent either a decrease in the amount you need for retirement after 65 or added income that could help combat later inflation.

Many Canadians have a pension plan through their jobs. Find out about your company pension plan today.

The people in the personnel office can help you. They'll be able to show you how to figure what you can expect from that plan if you retire at 55, 60, or 65.

Now, go back to the table, and subtract what your existing plan should pay you (item [5]) from what you think you're going to need. What you have left is the extra amount you're going to need each year, at least until you're 65 and your government benefits start.

How much must you save?

The chart (above right) estimates how much income you can expect, for each $1000 you have available, to buy an annuity, depending on your retirement age.

How to estimate your desired retirement income

I want to retire at age _____ which is _____ years from now.
My annual salary now is _____ $ [1]

Assuming an inflation rate of 3% per year, in _____ years I will need (multiply [3] by the appropriate figure taken from the Inflation Index at left) _____ $ [4]

My pension plan, at my chosen retirement age, should pay me an annual $ _____ [5]

Which means I will need (deduct [5] from [4]) _____ $ [6]

On a monthly basis that is (divide [6] by 12) _____ $

Age last birthday 40 45 50 55 60 65 70
Monthly income $6.30 6.60 7.00 7.45 8.00 8.60 9.35
*Income figures are slightly lower for women, because they have a longer life expectancy.

And if $100,000 sounds like an impossible amount, read on. If a 35-year-old man were to put about $170 each month into stocks, bonds, or mutual funds that averaged a growth rate of 8%, he'd have $100,000 cash by the time he was 55.

And if $170 each month sounds almost impossible, ask your Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities account executive about registering your securities.

You should have an RSP

Anyone who is investing money and paying income tax should have an RSP.

With an RSP (Registered Retirement Savings Plan) you can register most Canadian securities up to a maximum of $4000 each year, depending on your income and your existing pension plan arrangements. And you don't pay income tax on the dollars you invest.

If you're in a 40% tax bracket and invest $170 a month ($2040 each year) in an RSP, you'll get an annual tax rebate of $816. So you have only invested $1224 from your income after taxes. That's $102 a month, which thanks to the tax break is the $170 a month you need.

The government allows this because it wants you to be adequately prepared for retirement. It allows you to invest and earn income on dollars you would otherwise give to the tax man. So anyone who pays income tax should consider putting as much into an RSP as the government allows.

You don't pay income tax on RSP dollars until you take your retirement income (unless you cancel earlier) and then you'll probably be in a lower tax bracket.

So remember, when you and your Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities account executive start building your retirement investment portfolio, register as much as your income and other pension arrangements allow. If you find you need to invest more each year than your full RSP allowance, tell him. He can show you a lot of common sense ways to invest for retirement.

Now is the time to start building for your retirement. If you fill out and mail the coupon (below left), we'll help you plan your retirement investment portfolio.

Goldfingers . . . Their Shouts Punctuate Deadly Serious Game

PARIS (UPI) — They are called goldfingers . . . the buyers and sellers of gold, and their seemingly harmless shouts punctuate a deadly serious game . . . setting the metal's daily price.

Every workday shortly after noon several dozen of the jovial, ruddy-cheeked Frenchmen file into a windowless, smoke-filled basement room of the Palais Bruniart — seat of the stock exchange in central Paris. For the next half hour, about all that can be heard are loud shouts of "Je Prends" (I Take).

Clustered around an oval-shaped yellow wood bench, clutching little clipboards with white and blue buy-or-sell orders, the bullion market operators bid up or down the price of gold and a dozen gold coins as if ordinary wares — not the yellow metal — were at an auction block.

"I take twenty," booms out a goldfinger in an initial bid as a blue uniformed market official, his face unmoved, cries out the opening price and an electronically operated board on the wall facing him lights up to chronicle see-sawing prices.

In whispering tones the bidding brokers consult with their head offices over open telephone lines from booths rented by banks and gold brokers inside the room.

For several unbroken years the bidding has been one way only — up — but those on the selling side did not appear to be on the wrong end of the rope at the memorable trading session Tuesday, when demand generated so much heat that even some veteran operators shook their heads and called the bidding "sheer Folly."

In less than 20 minutes the price of gold ingot (2.2 pounds) shot up from $3,433 to $3,922 — the highest price in history and the highest day-to-day price increase ever.

Calculated in troy ounces, the rise moved the price of a tiny grain of gold the size of a snowflake from $106.17 to $124.06.

The demand for coins was even stronger, and lifted the price of a Mexican 20-peso coin from $14 to $24.50.

If there were no limitations on gold imports and exports, the market probably would calm down.

But, say the operators, growing affluence throughout the world will cause demand for gold to go on outstripping offer and keep the price ballooning.

The goldfingers say no gold merchant is likely to get out of business for some time to come.

Marijuana Farms Eyed

DENVER (UPI) — A legislative committee has voted to limit marijuana farmers to four acres of land. The amendment was added to a bill that would legalize the growing and selling of marijuana in Colorado.

One of 18 witnesses before the committee was John Finlator, former deputy director of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs. He said the time has come to stop jailing marijuana users.

"Let's continue to discourage the use of marijuana, and let's warn the users of any ill effects which may result from its use," said Finlator. "But let's not make criminals out of those who merely ignore our advice."

Finlator said 26 million Americans have smoked pot in the last year.

"We can no longer pay the enormous price to continue chasing marijuana smokers," he said.

TAX WEED

The Colorado legislature is studying a bill to legalize the sale of marijuana. The weed would be sold through existing liquor outlets and would be taxed. The revenues would be used for the state's old age pension.

The legislative committee voted to limit marijuana farmers to no more than four acres, to prohibit convicted felons from obtaining a marijuana seller's licence and to make it a felony to bootleg marijuana.

Marion Sinclair of Littleton, Colo., urged defeat of the bill.

"My story is simple, it's true, and it's tragic," she said. "I had a son, 19 years old, who died from an overdose of methadone. He started, like many others, with marijuana in high school. Not long after he changed friends and associations. After a year, he started taking pills because the kicks from marijuana were gone, old hat."

HIJACKERS TO RETURN

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — Argentina has agreed to extradite to Mexico a man and woman who hijacked a United States airliner in 1971, the attorney-general's office said Tuesday. The two are Robert Lee Jackson, an American, and Ligia Lucrecia Sanchez Archila, a Guatemalan. They hijacked a Braniff airliner with 109 people aboard while it was flying to New York from Acapulco.

Traffic Change June 3

A number of questions but few real concerns were fired at city traffic staff Thursday as downtown merchants were given a detailed explanation of the one-way street pairing of Johnson and Pandora scheduled to come into operation June 3.

Pandora will become a one-way street westbound in the city, and Johnson will feed traffic out of the city centre.

The scheme, costing an estimated $1.3 million and delayed several months by a number of engineering factors, has entailed two major realignment projects, at the Johnson-Begbie intersection and the Johnson Street bridgehead.

Traffic engineer Dave Campbell agreed with one merchant a possible source of trouble could be Broad Street, which will handle the northbound buses re-routed from Douglas when the one-way system comes into operation.

Campbell said Broad will handle 21 buses an hour between Johnson and Yates, and added: "That is one of our chief worries."

He gave an assurance, however, the situation would be watched closely. If too much congestion is created in the narrow street, Government would have to be considered as an alternative routing.

Another man, who said he had been a commercial driver for many years, expressed concern the new one-way streets would develop into a "dragstrip" for reckless drivers, as Fort and Yates had when they were first converted to one-way operation several years ago.

Campbell said the traffic lights will be set to allow for a speed of 28 m.p.h. between signals. In addition, there were likely to be police radar watches on some of the longer stretches such as Cook-Fernwood.

Campbell said the new one-way pairing will tend to give a better traffic distribution on all downtown streets, with the specific advantage of taking pressure from "overloaded" Johnson and directing more traffic to the under-used Pandora.

Johnson now carries 12,000 vehicles per day — 7,000 eastbound, 5,000 westbound. That will be reduced to a total one-way flow of about 10,000, he said.

PAIRED ROUTES changing over to one-way traffic are Johnson, going east, and Pandora, going west.

'Fair, Non-Political' Choice On Land-Use Board Lauded

The "non-political" character of appointments to the B.C. land commission was hailed today by two Vancouver Island regional leaders.

Capital Regional District chairman Jim Campbell, a farmer on Saturna Island, said "On the basis of the three I know, I think they are an excellent type of appointment, who will operate with a minimum of political influence."

Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney, president of Great National Land and Investment Corp. Ltd., said: "They are all people (with) a good cross-section of knowledge who will make fair and wise decisions. I don't think politics will enter into it," Ney said.

The five-member commission headed by 50-year-old lawyer William T. Lane, solicitor for Richmond, was named by the minister of agriculture Thursday.

Others to sit on the commission will be UBC plant science professor Dr. Vernon C. Brink; Oliver fruit grower Arthur E. Garrish; regional planner Mary Rawson, of Vancouver, and Nanaimo plaster contractor Ted Barby, a former alderman and school trustee active in conservation.

Ney said he knows Barby and called him a "square dealer" who gained a name in

B.C. as a fighter for fish and wildlife.

Rawson, who has done studies for the city of Nanaimo, Ney described as "very competent" with a "realistic approach to planning."

Campbell said he was a student under Dr. Brink and had met Lane who impressed him with his attitudes toward planning. Garrish is a "superior choice."

"I think everyone finds him to be very acceptable," said B.C. Federation of Agriculture secretary-treasurer Jack Wessel commenting on Garrish.

Garrish has been president of B.C. Tree Fruit Growers and the Canadian Horticultural Council and is recognized for his experience, Wessel said.

The others are not well known to the agriculture federation, "but we have high regard for them — a qualified professional group," the spokesman said.

The federation had hoped for more appointees with primary agricultural experience, but "no doubt he (Garrish) will hold up the interests of the primary producers," Wessel said.

Federation president Charles Bernhardt, of Sumnerland, said the appointees would provide the "type of cosmopolitan understanding we feel is required." President Peter Hyndman, of the B.C. Progressive Conservative party, called Lane's appointment "absolutely first class." Lane is a "very able lawyer and a very fair man."

Lane also was cited by Graham Stallard, president of the Planning Institute of B.C., which had made him an honorary member in recognition of his contribution to "sound development and his most valuable effort in teaching municipal law at UBC school of community and regional planning."

In welcoming the appointments, the institute's council was "particularly impressed with the knowledge and experience with land use planning of the membership."

"The province is such a wonderful place for us to live and work that sorting out some of the problems, particularly agricultural land use, is vital to our progress," said Lane Thursday after his appointment.

Lane has been active in a series of information lectures on land use for mayors and aldermen. He has written several books on regional planning and the law and has served as a consultant to the federal ministry of urban affairs.

For the past 17 years he has been municipal solicitor for Richmond, and currently chairman of the municipal law section of the Canadian Bar Association.

Agriculture minister Dave Stupich has described Lane as a strong advocate of proper land use planning.

Lane said he would be starting "from scratch" in the position. He said he does not know where the commission will be based, or whether it will involve hiring additional government staff.

Stupich has said the chairman's job will be full-time but the four other commissioners will serve on a part-time basis. He said the chairman would receive a salary in the $30,000 to $35,000 range and that the other four would probably be paid on a per diem basis.

THIRD SECTION

Finally, Sex Class Okay

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

"Human relations" have been approved as a course of study for all students in Saanich Peninsula School District.

A guide outlining suitable areas of study in the "physical, emotional and social aspects of human sexuality" was accepted by the school board this week and will soon go to parents for discussion.

Human relations, family life or human growth, whatever euphemism you use, sex education is finally becoming an accepted fact in B.C. schools.

The Saanich move follows closely a department of education policy statement which gave the first official approval to schools developing sex education courses.

The actual statement read in part: "The Hon. Eileen Daily, minister of education, has authorized the development of new policies in respect of providing additional opportunity for studies in the field of human growth and family living."

Those carefully chosen words mean sex education has been given the official stamp of approval.

The previous government, despite recommendations from provincial teacher, school trustee and parent groups, had consistently refused to give that support.

For nearly 10 years, however, increasing numbers of locally developed courses have been taught without approval.

Greater Victoria school board was one of the first to initiate a family life program with a 1964 experimental lecture series for a Grade 8 class.

The new government policy statement says a "resource guide" is being prepared for all elementary schools.

The guide is not to be regarded as a course but simply a reference including "the kinds of objectives deemed appropriate at this level, as well as ideas and suggestions as to the kinds of topics or questions" likely to arise.

At the secondary level, the statement says, local school districts should consider developing their own programs.

A set of provincial guidelines will eventually be drawn up.

The policy carefully stresses "there is no thought of contradicting or interfering with parental rights and responsibilities."

"The intention is simply to allow the school to supplement, not supplant the education parents wish to give their children."

"Nor is it envisaged that school programs would try to impose a 'state-determined' set of values or code of behavior."

It says also that parents must be consulted; that some individualized instruction be given; that "sexuality of the individual" not be overemphasized; that teachers not be assigned to teaching such courses unless they wish to and are capable; and that programs be subject to regular evaluation.

The new Saanich program falls within those guidelines and stresses "responsible behavior" and includes "not only the teaching of facts but also the development of attitudes and values which lead to healthy interpersonal relationships."

It outlines primary, intermediate and secondary level areas of study and includes a large bibliography and film guide.

No formalized courses are included and the guide will go before the department of education and parent meetings before it turns up in any classrooms.

The Victoria family life program involves using "the teachable moment" rather than explicit instruction in grades one to four; two film showings in grades five to seven; more direct instruction, films and question periods with a doctor in Grade 8; and a small number of discussion sessions in Grades 9 and 10.

Sooke school district reports some informal human relations discussions may take place in their schools but no formal program is envisaged to date.

Mild Boom Forecast For Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Riding a wave of general economic optimism in North America, Canada probably can expect a mild economic boom this year, the Conference Board of Canada said Thursday.

In a report entitled Business Outlook 1973 the independent organization said the Gross National Product (GNP) is expected to increase 6.5 per cent over 1972, exceeding last year's 5.5 per cent rise.

The 1972 GNP, the value of all goods and services produced annually in Canada, was about $109 billion.

The board, with headquarters in Ottawa and New York, bases its findings on April meetings of top economists.

The report also concluded:

—Business capital spending should rise by about 13 per cent, including a 14-per-cent rise in machinery and equipment spending and an eight-per-cent increase in non-residential construction.

—Investment in manufacturing, utilities and other economic sectors, particularly trade, finance and commercial services, should show substantial increases.

—There will be a sharp rise in exports which, combined with a slight decrease in the rate of growth of imports, will produce a neutral external sector of the economy.

—Agricultural output will "most likely increase by at least five per cent and possibly by 10 per cent" compared with a 10-per-cent decrease last year.

—Housing starts could decline by 10,000 units from an unprecedented 1972-level of 250,000 units.

—Consumer spending may increase by nearly 11 per cent, only slightly less than the increase last year.

—Unemployment probably will average 5.8 per cent despite strong gains in output.

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate in April, announced Tuesday by Statistics Canada, stood at 5.4 per cent, down from 5.5 in March. The actual figure was 6.3 and 6.8 per cent, respectively.

The report also predicted a continuation of activity in 1974.

EGG TRUCE ASKED

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich is urging the Manitoba provincial government to "act with some discretion" over the so-called "egg war" being waged between B.C. and the Prairie province.

Stupich said in an interview earlier this week he is "looking for some responsibility from the Manitoba government" over the issue, which has been precipitated by the actions of a Winnipeg wholesaler.

Egg dealer Bob Feldman has ignored a ruling by the B.C. Egg Marketing Board not to sell his product in B.C. Feldman shipped in 55,000 dozen eggs which were seized by the board in the Kootenays last month and then brought in another shipment of 11,340 dozen, which are currently being sold in Trail.

The marketing board claims the second shipment is too small to bother with and has left Feldman alone.

Stupich said both B.C. and Manitoba are anxious to see a national egg agency to control has left Feldman alone.

Stupich said both B.C. and Manitoba are anxious to see a national egg agency to control interprovincial movement of eggs. He thinks such a body should be modelled on the B.C. board, which he said has been the most successful in Canada in controlling production to meet demand. The minister said this will be the province's position at a meeting in Ottawa May 23 of all provincial egg marketing boards.

APHIDS ATTACKING SPRUCE TREES

A pest attacking spruce and Douglas fir in the Victoria area is the cooley spruce gall aphid, says entomologist Jack Arrand.

It forms unsightly galls at the new tip growth. On Douglas fir no galls are formed but the presence is noted by small, white wool tufts on the lower surface of the needles.

He said the aphids do not reduce tree vigor or growth unless the tree is small.

Arrand said the pest can be controlled by cutting off the fresh green galls. A spray is seldom required.

EXERCISE WITH MILK

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — There is no sense in encouraging children to drink milk unless they also are encouraged to exercise, says a University of Saskatchewan professor.

Dr. Stuart Houston said Tuesday that without exercise the calcium in milk is absorbed by the blood and excreted. Without exercise bones can lose the calcium they already possess, leaving them weak and brittle.

Resurrected Quarry Nears 70th Birthday

World famous Butchart Gardens is just now entering its 70th year — A fact that will bring nostalgic memories to oldtime Victorians who remember the man and woman who started those gardens, Robert and Jenny Butchart.

It's a story that has been told before. Nevertheless, at this time of year, with flowers in bloom and summer visitors again coming here with the Butchart Gardens topping their lists of things to see, it bears repeating.

The Butcharts came to this city from Ontario at the turn of the century when Robert was investigating limestone deposits on the Saanich Peninsula.

He started a cement mill at Tod Inlet and they lived near the quarry. In a small house from where Jenny could see that hole in the ground getting bigger and bigger.

Finally the limestone was exhausted and the plant was moved to the other side of the inlet, leaving nothing but an abandoned cement mill and the ugly pit.

"It's a disgraceful mess," Jenny Butchart would say to her husband.

"The world must have cement," he would reply.

"That may be," the determined little woman would come back, "but the world needs beauty, too."

The word "beauty" may have been the spark that inspired Jenny Butchart. Or it may have been something churning away in her subconscious for days. In any case, legend has it, that as they looked down at the abandoned quarry she said "we'll make a garden down there ... it's a perfect place for a garden."

Butchart believed his wife's ideas were usually sound. So he said "go ahead."

Long afterward, he would tell people that he knew nothing about flowers, or gardens. "I knew daisies and dandelions and I could tell a rose, but that's all. I left the whole thing to Mrs. Butchart."

He did, however, share her enthusiasm. He gave her a group of Chinese workers from the cement plant to help. He also produced the first of the thousands of dollars he put back into the ground at "Benvenuto", the name Jenny Butchart chose for the place.

It's an Italian word meaning "welcome". And the Butchart family has never ceased trying to live up to that word.

Through the bottom of the old quarry there trickled a stream and it was in some earth along that stream that Mrs. Butchart put her first plants.

More earth was brought in. More shrubs and flowers were planted. Until finally the unsightly hole in the ground was converted into a beautiful sunken garden.

The Butcharts loved to travel and they brought back plants and shrubs from places they visited. Alaska, the Yukon, Europe and Asia all yielded "treasures" as Jenny Butchart called them.

In a few years the quarry was filled with bloom that spilled up and over into surrounding gardens on the level and then down toward the water.

'Restrict Atomizers'

OTTAWA (CP) — Over-the-counter atomizers containing potent medications for asthmatics should be sold only on prescription, says Dr. Percy Barsky of Winnipeg.

About 98 per cent of Winnipeg-area doctors surveyed agreed that the pressurized spray apparatus should be restricted to prescription order, he said in a recent issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

Such orders were made mandatory in the United States and Britain following reports that agents used in the atomizers were linked with deaths of asthmatics and of young people trying for drug highs.

Barsky, medical director for family care at Winnipeg Children's Hospital, said freon gas used in the aerosols has serious, sometimes lethal, effects on the heart.

"In Canada, these potentially-toxic items are carried by thousands of asthmatic children and adults who are using them daily. They are sold over the counter in every drugstore, are advertised by department stores at bargain prices and may be purchased by anyone without a prescription."

Barsky and his colleagues carried out a survey of both doctors and pharmacists.

The pharmacists reported that at least 25 per cent of buyers purchased the aerosols without prescription or direction from a doctor, the article said.

Seventy per cent said they thought there was over-medication through their use.

The pharmacists said about 25 per cent of users complained of side effects, such as rapid heart throbbing or irritability.

Eighty per cent of the doctors thought prescription order would pose no handicap for patients who needed the treatment.

Barsky said the federal health department branch had been informed of the reported deaths in Britain and the U.S. In 1971, however, the branch said no such deaths had been evident in Canada.

Canadian manufacturers were asked to insert warnings on the labels advising the patient not to exceed the dosage recommended by his physician, Barsky said. But the position of the branch now was that prescription orders were not necessary.

"It is increasingly evident that a situation which requires some rectification or a just ment now exists," Barsky said.

The Canadian Pediatric Society safety promotion committee also has recommended restricting sales to prescription holders, he said.

"Such action could protect the lives of thousands of asthmatics in this country."

Competition 'Catalyst For Hatred'

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Competitive sports is a catalyst for hatred and fighting rather than a release for aggression if heavily emphasized in a child's life, a United States psychologist said Tuesday.

Dr. Carolyn Sherif, professor of psychology at Pennsylvania State University, told a national conference on children and sports that "win-all, lose-all" competition can promote open conflict among children.

She cited a study in the U.S. where open hostility resulted after selected 12-year-old boys were divided into competing teams at a summer camp tournament. Aggression and hatred gradually flared up, culminating in raids on cabins, the theft and burning of one team's flag and the refusal to socialize.

Dr. Geoff Govan of Vanier City near Ottawa, a member of the Coaching Association of Canada, said sports is turning into a vast award-giving activity.

"We're in danger of losing sight of things if we throw out armfuls of awards," he said.

"It could be brought to the ridiculous with a reward for being the most valuable arm pit on the team."

Mouth Organ Grind

DEAR ABBY: We are retired. As a child my husband was kicked around, didn't have much education, but Bernie schooled himself and became a very big business success. We have no money problem but I have a big problem with Bernie.

He has decided that he is a "performer." He has had no musical training, but now he tries to play the mouth organ by just blowing in and drawing out. He doesn't wait to be asked, he carries the mouth organ everywhere, and offers to play. He is simply terrible, but people don't know how to discourage him.

We recently went to a party and Bernie held the floor for 45 minutes attempting one song after another. It was dreadful. I was so embarrassed I couldn't hold my head up. Meanwhile he fancies himself a natural talent.

I have a feeling people are looking at us sideways. I asked Bernie not to play in public until he learns a few numbers, but he blew his top and said, "Everyone else thinks I'm great. You're just jealous."

He reminds me of a man we both knew who had a good voice when he was young, but in his later years his efforts to entertain were pitiful. When he died I heard people say, "Well, now we won't have to listen to 'Shanty Town' anymore."

How can I handle this? I love him, but he won't listen to me. — Better Half.

DEAR BETTER: If you can't enlist Bernie's best friend to tell him the truth about his "talent," and he continues his compulsion to share it, urge him to practice and hope he improves, and try to prevail upon him to make his performances brief.

DEAR ABBY: My husband isn't an alcoholic, but after he's had a few he gets very generous and starts giving away things. (His cufflinks, expensive pens and pencils, even the necktie he is wearing.) He practically forces things on people, some of whom he hardly knows.

Some folks realize it was the booze talking, and the next day they will return whatever he's given them. But most people just keep it.

Is there a solution to this problem? — His Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Yes. Sobriety.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I live on the same street with my inlaws, and since we have the same last name, the Post Office is constantly getting our mail mixed up. When my mother-in-law gets our mail by mistake, she opens it and reads it. Then she brings it over. She knows all our business before we do.

I told my husband to tell his mother to quit opening our mail, but he doesn't want to start a fight. Don't tell us to ask the Post Office to be more careful. They have every excuse in the book from mail sorters who can't read, to addresses they aren't able to make out. Sometimes I think they do it on purpose. What should we do? — No Privacy.

DEAR NO: Since your husband doesn't want to irritate his mother, a Post Office box might be a good investment.

His Hobby Has Strings Attached family

By NICOLE STRICKLAND

"A violin," muses Sigvald Hoibakke softly, "is like a beautiful woman. The sound must be soft and silky, like a woman's voice. The shape, if you add a head and legs, is like a woman's body. The music imitates a soprano's singing. There is no instrument more perfect or more beautiful."

Hoibakke's love affair with violins extends back to his Norwegian childhood; when as a boy of 13, he made his first violin. Today, living in Victoria, he estimates that he has made about 100 violins in his lifetime — each a work of love and art.

"Factories," he says, "make them by the millions. They mass produce machine-made violins. They don't think about the tone. They just think about having them look nice on the outside and producing them fast. They are just noiseboxes."

But Hoibakke's violins are not noiseboxes. Each takes an average of two years to complete — chiselled and sanded by hand until the tone is perfect, the shape is perfect, the glazing is perfect.

"The varnish I use takes months to dry. If I used a fast-drying varnish it would become hard and make a raspy sound. The raw wood used to make a violin is stored in free, open air, and never in a heated room. If not enough time has been taken to season the wood, the instrument will crack."

In Hoibakke's basement, at 1555 Pembroke, and in his upstairs workshop, and in his music room, violins hang suspended from the ceiling, lie partly carved on tables, stand propped against walls — all in different stages of completion.

The wood is scraped, and scraped, and scraped until the tonal qualities of top and bottom are perfect — a skill requiring a musical ear that can be duplicated by no machine.

"The bottom of the violin must be higher in pitch than the top," says Hoibakke. "The difference in pitch between the top and the bottom goes from half-tone to two-and-a-half-tones on different violins. The best instruments are approximately one tone in difference.

"It takes a long time to know how to recognize the sound and know where to file away the wood. Just a little bit of scraping the wood and the instrument changes completely. If the top and the bottom are not tuned together properly, you will have a dischord.

Hoibakke working on violin

"A good hand-made violin sells for up to $2,500, and uses $100 worth of materials. For two years' work, perhaps that isn't really very much profit."

Always shining before any violin maker is the work of Antonius Stradivarius, master carver.

"No one knows much about him, but he was probably the greatest name in existence for violin making. He was born in 1644 and died in 1737, making 1,200 to 1,500 violins in his lifetime. His violins were the most beautiful-looking of all; his workmanship is unsurpassed.

"The highest price paid for one of his violins, as far as I know, has been over $250,000. I suppose today one cannot get a genuine Stradivarius for less than $30,000 to $40,000, because their antique value is so great.

"They were specially made from a type of red pine that grows in the European Alps. I don't know how long it would have taken to make one, but a long time, because the varnish was so slow to dry.

"There are 500 absolutely genuine Strads remaining in the world, both factory and hand-made. They have always and other experts say are not. There are millions of forgeries, with fake Stradivarius labels inside.

"There are hundreds of thousands of old instruments in the world, both factory and handmade. They have always been bad, always are bad, and always will be bad. They may improve with age for the first 10 years, but after that, they don't improve at all. The wood, the shape, and the workmanship are in many cases so poor, a Strad label inside makes the whole thing ridiculous."

The violin, says Hoibakke, is theorized to have originated with Leonardo da Vinci between 1425 and 1440. Legend has it that da Vinci one day presented his pupils with a study of acoustics and musical instruments, the first violin being the result of his findings.

Handing an art pupil a complete violin, da Vinci instructed his student to take the instrument out into the world and teach people about its beauty and its music. That first violin, legend follows, was so perfect that almost nothing about its shape has been altered.

Today, the violin is one of the best recognized and most popular instruments, with millions in existence.

PILL FOR MEN LONG WAY OFF

TORONTO (CP) — Men will wait a long time before a birth control pill is developed for them, a doctor predicted Thursday.

And it will be perhaps 10 to 18 years before women can expect a once-a-month pill, Dr. Frank Philbrook, medical director of Ortho Pharmaceutical Canada Ltd., told the annual meeting of Planned Parenthood of Toronto.

The preliminary male pill has to be ruled out because the taker must not drink liquor, he said.

Philbrook, speaking on contraception in 1984, said that although research is continuing into mechanical birth control devices, the hope seems to lie in the chemical-biological field.

He said far into the future—not this century and perhaps not at all—lies the possibility of a contraceptive chemical being added on government order to a central supply of drinking water.

But such a situation would arise only if the population became so large that famine, pestilence and wars would result, said Philbrook.

He said female contraceptive pills are preferred to male pills because, in addition to problems of developing a satisfactory male pill, women are more motivated to prevent conception.

Effortless Exercisers Worthless

NEW YORK (NYT) — Linda Costanza, clad only in a black leotard, stepped onto a belt vibrating machine at the Better Business Bureau the other day and flipped on the switch. The belt went jiggle-jiggle-jiggle against her slender, 105-pound body.

The occasion was a news conference at which the bureau announced that "effortless exercisers" that jiggle, slap and massage a person's fat were worthless in reducing body weight and inches.

These machines — fixtures in most health clubs and hot sellers in department stores — include the belt vibrating machine that Miss Costanza, a 20-year-old dictaphone operator, demonstrated; roller machines; vibrating massage tables, and other devices where the person expends no energy of his or her own.

"I say unequivocally that these machines have no value whatsoever in weight loss," said Dr. Morton Glenn, an assistant professor of clinical medicine at the New York University College of Medicine, who has worked in the field of obesity control for 21 years.

"What they do basically is jiggle fat," he added, "and jiggle fat does not take off weight. The only way you can do that is to expend more calories than you consume."

The news conferences was the second battle in the bureau's current war against so-called fraudulent reducing devices. Last September, a similar conference was called "to blow the cover off" the body wrap method of weight-girth reduction.

"Millions upon millions of people want to reduce weight and girth, but they really don't want to work at it," Woodrow Wirsig, bureau president said.

"They want a slim silhouette instantly, and without effort. It just doesn't work."

Wirsig said the bureau had conducted an investigation of the "effortless exercisers" and found, "to our satisfaction," that the machines don't work.

However, he refused to reveal any details of the investigation, such as when and where the testing was done, the age, sex and weight of the people used, the time period involved, and the kinds of machines that were tested.

"That's not relevant," Wirsig asserted. "All that's important is that we know these machines do not help people lose weight or girth. Frequently, all they reduce is the consumer's pocketbook."

Do the machines do any good at all? "Well, they do make people feel good," replied Glenn, author of "How to Get Thinner Once and For All." "They're kind of a mechanical massager, and that makes people feel good."

He grudgingly conceded that the machines may help some people's circulation — "but only in the most-remote circumstances. They may even cause some damage, especially to people suffering from — diabetes, arteriosclerosis, varicose veins or arterial diseases."

Wirsig said that the bureau had received "many complaints" from consumers who said the machines were ineffective. Some of the consumers bought the machines in stores, he said, while others ordered them through the mail, or used them in health clubs they had joined.

"Ask yourself this question," he said. "Will the device make me work in such a way that I spend energy and actively use my body in trimming off the weight? Or does it do the work for me?"

"Anything that does the work for you ... will not reduce weight or trim girth."

Wirsig said that while he thought the manufacturers of the machines were not being deliberately deceptive, he believed that their advertising implied weight and girth loss.

About the only machine that came out smelling like a rose was the stationary bicycle, on which a person has to do the pedalling himself. The electric bicycle was criticized, "because the only work you do is put the plug into the socket," Glenn said.

The slender doctor advised the 44 million overweight North Americans "living in a culture that is obsessed with losing weight" that they should not depend too much on exercise alone for losing that weight.

"You can climb 20 flights of stairs and only lose 80 calories — little more than is found in a slice of bread," he said.

Overweight Problems Traced Back to Womb

TORONTO (CP) — Weight problems for adults often begin very early in life — during the last three months a baby is in the womb, says a noted New York researcher into obesity problems.

The other two most vulnerable periods when the groundwork is laid for obesity are during the first two years of life and just before the onset of puberty, Dr. John Hirsch told a meeting of the Ontario Medical Association Wednesday.

During these times fat builds rapidly in the body, and researchers believe that once the fat cells are built, they stay.

If a person loses weight, these cells flatten and shrink, but the total number remains the same, he said. And like a stretched balloon, they tend to be refilled easily.

Hirsch, professor and senior physician at Rockefeller University and Hospital, also said fat people whose weight problem began in childhood continue to think of themselves as fat even after they have lost weight.

They have a "marked distortion" in their image of themselves, he said. This distortion becomes more marked the thinner they become.

Obesity was one of the main topics at the first day of educational and scientific sessions at this week's OMA meeting.

Norman Green, chief of medicine at Doctors Hospital, said appetite depressants and other drugs have limited value in treating obesity.

At best they may provide a crutch to help while the patient is breaking bad eating habits and developing new ones, he said. They also may help when the patient is going on holiday or where he would be faced with "all those goodies he finds it so hard to stay away from."

Earlier, a group session was told that medical schools offer "practically no teaching" about aging and its problems, although the practice of many doctors already has almost 50 per cent senior citizens.

R. C. Laird, head of the Ontario Geriatric Study Centre, said the aged now form 10 per cent of the population and, because of increased life expectancy and improved medical and surgical care, their numbers are growing.

Doctors need continuing education courses about the care of the aged, and medical schools should offer much more on aging to their students.

National Ballet Troupe Under Scrutiny in U.S.

By CLIVE BARNES
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Although the National Ballet of Canada is only 23 years old, it is one of the oldest classic dance companies in North America. Indeed, offhand I can think of only American Ballet Theatre, New York City Ballet, the San Francisco Ballet and the Royal Winnipeg Ballet as predating it among still existing organizations.

Nevertheless, in terms of history, 23 years is not very long, even though the company is already five years older than Britain's Royal Ballet was when it made its American debut at the old Metropolitan Opera House in 1949. Yet, for various reasons, the Canadian company has not had as easy a path to the top as its British godparent.

THREE COMPANIES

In a way, the comparison between the National Ballet of Canada and Britain's Royal Ballet is inescapable, for this Canadian troupe is one of the three major international companies that has been inspired by Dame Ninette de Valois and her Royal Ballet. The other two are Peggy Van Praagh's Australian Ballet and John Cranko's Stuttgart Ballet. All three companies are vastly different, but all have been formed by De Valois—proteges, all have taken a traditional classic basis for their repertory, and all have laid enormous stress upon a permanent ballet school attached to the company.

This is a company of about 60 dancers. It is a strong company and has grown markedly better over the years. I have watched the troupe grow in stature since 1965, and certainly the developments in the past few years have been impressive. This is almost entirely due to director Celia Franca's insistence, right from the start on forming a ballet school for the future.

This has been directed by Betty Oliphant, who is also nowadays the associate artistic director of the company. Of the company's six ballerinas, no less than four received all of their training from the National Ballet School, and this is also true of the company's young leading male dancer, the extraordinarily promising Frank Augustyn.

Earlier I suggested it has not been as lucky as Britain's Royal Ballet—why? First, it has never had a major choreographer attached to it, or even an important minor choreographer. Moreover, Miss Franca's choice of repertory has been haphazard and uncertain. Second, the company has never had a home of its own—it is an itinerant company like our own American Ballet Theatre, although, of course, ballet theatre can appear in New York rather more than the Canadians can appear in their home base, Toronto.

LITTLE ORIGINALITY

The company has style and taste, but little originality. It dances like the Royal Ballet—which is a very good way to dance—but with slightly less conviction. So what is a nice company like this doing at the Metropolitan Opera House when its previous New York engagement was a one-night stand in Brooklyn?

The answer can be given in two words: Rudolf Nureyev. Nureyev is using this company as an ensemble for himself, just as, a couple of seasons ago, he used the Australian Ballet. The Canadians have one great advantage over the Australians—their travel expenses are less.

Unless the Canadian government was prepared to subsidize the company on massive lines, there would be no way in which the National Ballet of Canada could play the Metropolitan Opera House without Nureyev. However, Nureyev's presence does not really demean the company. Indeed, judiciously used, Nureyev could be the best thing ever to have happened to the Canadian company, for he is giving it wide exposure, a Sol Hurok tour, and an example of balletic gusto. No company that has come into contact with the extraordinary dance genius of Nureyev has emerged the worse for it. With Nureyev and Bruhn (who is an artistic adviser to the company) the Canadians have men at the root of contemporary classic dancing, and their influence must be considerable.

GOOD COMPANY

Canadians, with their ultrasensitivity to American comment, will probably regard it as unnecessarily patronizing if I point out that this company is not yet among the world's great ballet companies. It needs a choreographer, and it needs a repertory of its own. But it is a very good company, and one capable of providing a great deal of pleasure.

Its New York engagement started with a week of Nureyev's staging of "The Sleeping Beauty," which is to be repeated all this coming week. The Canadians can claim to be the best decorated company in North America (only ballet theatre could give them a run for their money) and Nicholas Georgiadis's settings and costumes for this production live up to that decorative tradition. This is a sumptuous production (incidentally, like Nureyev's staging, it is based on a version originally created for La Scala, Milan) and Nureyev's idiosyncratic yet sensitive realization of the choreography has much to commend it. This is one of the best productions of "The Sleeping Beauty" around.

I thought so when I first saw it—with Fonteyn and Nureyev—at La Scala, and I think so now. But the Canadians dance it better.

performances have seen so far have been most exciting.

The company has also introduced us to a group of the most charming young Canadian dancers. The ones that have interested me most so far have been Veronica Tennant, Frank Augustyn and the very promising Karen Kain. American Ballet Theatre has also been touring around and last weekend ended its tour at the Kennedy Centre in Washington, where it is the resident company. The opera house at the Kennedy Centre is one of the ideal places in the world to see ballet and it is no wonder that Washington is developing a formidable dance audience. Nowadays Washington gets more ballet than any other city in the country, apart, of course, from New York, and not only are the ballet theatre audiences large and well informed, they are also, interestingly, supplemented by New York fans.

British TV Critics Have Fun Panning CBC's Jalna Series

LONDON (CP) — British television viewers had their first taste Thursday of the CBC's Whiteoaks of Jalna saga and the critical reaction so far is one of caustic hilarity.

"I for one," says Daily Mirror critic Mary Malone, "will take a long time to forget immortal lines such as: 'Oh God, why can't things be the way they used to be?'"

"Mind you, give credit to those canny Canadian writers who know the fallibility of memory. They drummed home every line so that everybody echoed everybody else: 'You must sell Jalna.' 'Sell Jalna?' 'Jalna! Jalna!'"

At this dialogue rate, The Mirror critic concludes, the serial should run 25 years.

The production is being shown here on the Thames commercial channel in the 13 episodes which were all that the CBC made before deciding to call it a day, or as Nancy Banks-Smith in The Guardian puts it, "before the man in the white coat came."

'COLLISION' SUSPECTED

Miss Banks-Smith, a highly-respected TV critic, says Jalna looks as though the Forsyte Saga and Peyton Place "had collided most messily."

"It really is a very nasty accident... one hardly knows which piece of dead dialogue to pick up first."

The Guardian critic sums up the first episode thus: "The family briefly, consists of Renny who is haughty and Meggy who is potty and Dilly who is randy and Granny who is ghastly. I like Maurice though. The exigencies of the plot required him to rush in shouting 'It's war!' or 'It's me'..." Right from the start, she says, she suspected something because Jalna was "most dreadfully infested with musicians, always a bad sign."

"Jalna had musicians the way most houses have mice."

CITY MAY MIX CARS, TENNIS

Park your car or practise your backhand — you'll soon be able to do both at the same city location, if city council approves a recommendation of its parks committee.

The dual-purpose tennis area-cum-parking lot, an idea borrowed from California, is proposed for the area adjacent to Royal Athletic Park, bounded by Vancouver, Caledonia and Green.

Estimated cost of the entire project, including fencing, lighting and laying out four practice tennis courts, is $8,300.

A total of 100 parking spaces will be provided on the perimeter of the area, and the four courts in the centre will be surrounded by a chain link fence.

When additional parking space is needed, gates will swing open to accommodate cars on the playing area.

Parks director Cliff Bate told the committee courts can be provided at a "minimal" $1,500 each, instead of about $6,000 for a regular court. He said he had used the term "practice courts" because, in the interests of economy grades won't be precise and such factors as net height may not be to exact tennis specifications.

He said he hopes the project's success will encourage owners of other parking lots in the city to provide similar facilities.

Most Briefs Urging B.C. To Improve Home Care

CRANBROOK (CP) — The chairman of the provincial legislative standing committee on social welfare and education says the need for intermediate nursing care facilities and improved home care have been the main issue raised in the committee's tour of British Columbia.

Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver Centre) and her committee ended a two-day hearing here Thursday.

Committee member Dr. G. Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) said B.C. is miles behind other provinces, especially Alberta, in providing intermediate nursing care and improving home care facilities.

He said he'd be disappointed if there is not legislation on these two issues at the fall session of the legislature.

In a brief to the committee, the B.C. Professional Pharmacists Society charged there is an acute problem in distribution of drugs to mental patients and welfare recipients.

The society urged that a government-controlled stock of drugs be dispensed through local drug stores and that welfare recipients be allowed the same medical supplies allowed to others.

The committee heard a total of 12 briefs in two days, including a Trail brief urging more government funds be made available for homemaker training programs, and a department of human resources brief urging establishment of community resources centres amalgamating public health, education and social welfare services.

A Creston delegation suggested improved intermediate nursing care to bridge the gap between old-folks' homes and extended care units.

Byelection Soon

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed said Wednesday a byelection to fill the vacant Calgary Foothills seat will be called "soon." The premier did not elaborate.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A former heroin addict who stole a $130 leather coat while awaiting trial on a narcotics charge Thursday was sent to jail for six months.

"You were scarcely a model of deportment before taking heroin," Judge William Ostler told 23-year-old Peter John Duckworth, 1109 Finlayson.

Duckworth pleaded guilty to stealing the coat from The Bay May 4, three days after he was released on bail on charges of possession of heroin, hashish and cocaine.

Ostler said Duckworth had "done well" in kicking the heroin habit in the past month. A forestry camp would give the "period of supervision and guidance" Duckworth needed to complete his cure, said Ostler.

after a complaint from The Empress early Thursday.

Walter Arabaskey, 27, of Vancouver was jailed two months after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana and LSD.

Arabaskey, put on probation for a similar offence only two months ago, was picked up by police April 27 with a small amount of marijuana and LSD on him.

A 34-year-old woman who shoplifted almost $80 worth of clothes from two department stores was fined $250 and put on eight months' probation.

Celia Kostal, 568 Hillside, admitted taking almost $80 worth of women's clothes from Woolco. When stopped by security staff, a $20 tennis suit, stolen from Simpson Sears, was found in her purse.

Donald Ian Restall, 17, of 946 Oliver, was fined $100 and given six months' probation after pleading guilty to a May 9 charge of possession of marijuana seeds and hashish.

John Charles Ebersole, 20, of Salt Spring Island, was fined $75 after pleading guilty to a charge of marijuana possession. Ebersole was stopped Wednesday at 8:35 p.m. on Wharf, with a newly-bought bag of marijuana on him.

A 19-year-old man who "intended supporting himself" on the sale of hashish was jailed five months by Ostler on a charge of possession for the purpose of trafficking.

Gordon Wesley Wiebe, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty. He had been stopped in the 1200 block Wharf by police, who later found seven grams of hashish on him.

Prosecutor Bob Johnston said Wiebe had bought one-quarter-ounce of hashish in Vancouver "to offset expenses" while looking for a job in Victoria.

Wiebe's jail sentence will be followed by one year's probation. Gregory Bryce Smith, 22, of 1025 Burdett, was jailed a total of five months on Wednesday, followed by a one-year probationary term, after pleading guilty to eight counts of false pretences, one count of attempted false pretences and one charge of forgery.

Smith passed bad cheques for $648.97 between April 14 and 28. He pleaded guilty to an April 9 forgery charge, involving a woman's pension cheque for $542.

Ostler sentenced him to five months on each count.

A 30-year-old man who committed indecent assaults on three young girls was sent to jail for five months, followed by one year's probation. Shon Mockridge, 400 Easter, said he "was very ashamed" of the offences, committed in July and August of 1972 and February, 1973.

Mockridge said he "took the girls off the street... to help them... and got dragged into this (the court case)."

Ostler told him his sentence "might have been different... if the offence had been an isolated one." In view of the repeated nature of the assaults, however, he had no option but to sentence the man to five months on each charge, sentences to run concurrently.

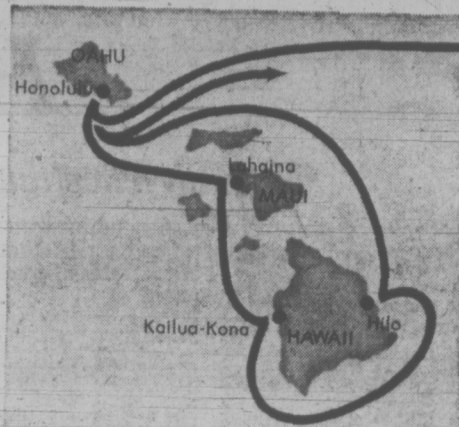

"If you want to maintain a happy marriage, talk things out, rather than slugging them out."

That was Ostler's advice to a 24-year-old man charged with assault causing grievous bodily harm on his wife. "You're a pretty decent fellow," the judge told Francis Holland, 582 Hillside, who pleaded guilty May 4 to the assault on his wife. Holland was given a six-month suspended sentence.

"Seeds are the basis of everything," Ostler explained to a 20-year-old Lasqueti Island man, charged with possession of marijuana seeds and hashish.

Patrick Lawrence Harvey McFadden indicated he didn't know it was illegal to have the seeds. "You now know possession of seeds is illegal," said Ostler, ordering a six-month probationary term for McFadden who was picked up

ORGANIC FOODS 'OVER SOLD'

EDMONTON (CP) — Many so-called organic foods are simply ordinary food products sold at four times the original price, says a federal health department official.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister of the Health Protection branch, said studies show no major differences in pesticide residue levels in organic and ordinary foods.

"I eat some health foods just because I like them, but I don't feel I have to go to a health food store to get good nutrition," he said following a speech to the Canadian Health Food Dealers Association.

Shoppers should be able to purchase a wide variety of products in health food stores as long as their health is not being endangered and there is no fraud.

Dr. Morrison criticized dealers who "persist in trying to make outlandish, unjustifiable claims for health foods."

"There are some who, if left uncontrolled, would defraud the public and endanger public health by making claims which are at best silly, and at worst, downright dangerous."

Incredible Stories By Credible People

VANCOUVER (CP) — A prominent American astronomer said that 1972 was a vintage year for sightings of unidentified flying objects (UFOs).

Dr. Allan Hynek, of the Lindheimer Astronomical Research Centre at Northwestern University, Chicago, said in an interview 452 UFOs were reported to him in 1972.

Hynek, here to deliver a technical paper to the University of British Columbia's Institute of Astronomy and Space Science symposium, said "these are incredible stories told by credible persons."

"These persons might be scientists, technicians, pilots, persons on mountain lookouts; in short, anyone who is supposed to know something about observing," he said.

Hynek said 80 per cent of the reports can be eliminated, but the remaining 20 per cent are never explained—at least not publicly.

Asked if any of the unexplained 20 per cent might be visitors from outer space, Hynek said that as a scientist, he would have to say there is not enough evidence to support the theory.

Hynek has worked with the U.S. Air Force, tracking down UFO reports.

Robbery Foiled

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — An attempt at robbing a Pay-N-Save service station was foiled here Tuesday by a quick thinking attendant who pushed aside a rifle that was pointed at him.

Frank Jackson, then punched the bandit, still seated behind the wheel of his car, and tried to yank him from the vehicle by his hair. The robber escaped empty handed.

Woman's Blouse Slashed

Mrs. Shirley Anderson's blouse had 30 cuts, slashes and puncture marks in it when her body was found on the living room floor of her apartment March 9, B.C. Supreme Court was told Thursday.

It was "saturated" in blood, Saanich police Sgt. Anthony Clarke testified.

Clarke was a Crown witness in the non-capital murder trial of Jo Ann Brenda Anderson, 17, of 10-4060 Cedar Hill X Rd., charged after the fatal stabbing of her 38-year-old mother.

The trial, before a jury of seven men and five women, began Monday and is expected to continue into next week.

A carving knife, serrated bread knife, pair of scissors and rolling pin were found near the body, said Clarke.

On the dead woman's stomach was a "footprint-type imprint," said Clarke.

A photograph of the imprint was taken and compared with a photograph of the sole of a shoe found near the head of the body.

"I came to the conclusion that this type of shoe did that mark," he said.

Clarke identified more than 25 articles taken from the scene which included various items of clothing, a palmprint and footprint in sections of carpet, and a letter to the accused.

A carving set case was found in a closed drawer, said Clarke. Only the sharpener was in the case — the knife was missing.

The officer also showed the court a woman's bandanna, found beside Mrs. Anderson's body, which had 12 cut marks in it.

He said wounds found on the woman's neck appeared to have been caused by a serrated instrument.

Dr. Athol Piper, the Andersons' family physician, testified he treated Jo Ann at Royal Jubilee Hospital March 9 for cuts on her left hand.

Piper agreed with defence counsel Michael Hutchison the wounds on her hand appeared more like stabs than slashes.

"Would they (the wounds) be consistent with an attempt to ward off a blow with a sharp instrument?" asked Hutchison.

"Yes, but I can't be sure," replied the doctor.

"In the half-hour that you were with her, did she seem detached from the events of the evening?"

"Yes, she did."

"Did she appear to have little or no knowledge of the antecedent events of that evening?"

"That's a hard question to answer, but the appearances were that."

Hutchison then asked if the doctor had treated Jo Ann for a bout of apparent amnesia after an incident in March, 1972, when she had a lack of recall for a period of some hours.

Piper said he had.

Asked if, in the doctor's opinion, the girl's character and personality were consistent with the crime with which she is charged, Piper replied, "I would not have suspected this to have occurred."

Defending the girl with Hutchison is Cecil Branson. Prosecutors are George MacMinn and Ted Pollard.

Knox plans on studying law at Cambridge for the next year.

Barrett said the selection committee of representatives from UBC, UVic, Simon Fraser University, the department of education and the provincial secretary's department, had a difficult task in choosing a winner from among the applicants for the 1973 scholarship.

The dispute involves 11 railway companies, including Canadian National and Canadian Pacific, and eight unions.

Caution at A-Plants Impresses Aldermen

NORTH COWICHAN — Two North Cowichan aldermen were impressed with nuclear power installations in Ontario.

Tom Burge and Ron McKinnon said the visit to three atomic plants cleared up many misconceptions about nuclear power.

"We were impressed by the frankness and openness of the replies to our questions," said Burge. "I came away with the feeling that there are still some unsolved problems in the production of nuclear power, but I was impressed by the cautious approach and by their cautious attitude."

"I think we are on the right track producing power in this manner," he added. "To anybody who is worrying about nuclear power, I say go there yourself and you will come back with a better understanding."

The aldermen will make a detailed report on their tour to ratepayers' groups.

The tour was organized by the Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce. Fifteen Vancouver Islanders took part.

Air Market Split Looms

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's international air policy, now being overhauled, will likely split the world market between Air Canada and CP Air.

A government source says one of the most important changes is expected to be a rough percentage division between the two carriers of the international air cargo and passenger market. This would ensure that neither airline has unfair advantage over the other.

In addition, the carriers will probably be assigned new territory under the policy of naming CP Air or Air Canada as the Canadian carrier to different parts of the world. Africa, for example, has not been granted to either one.

The source says the new policy will not be announced for some time, at least a month from now.

The policy review is taking longer than expected. Transport Minister Jean Marchand estimated early in March that it would be announced in mid-April.

SHOWED CONCERN

He expressed concern in a March 23 Commons speech that Air Canada is not guaranteed a dominant position on international routes.

He noted that domestic air policy assures Air Canada 75 per cent of the Canadian market. But no such division exists for international route served by Canadian airlines.

Unless these limits were spelled out clearly, CP Air could replace Air Canada as the major international carrier, he said.

The government source said that a percentage split on international routes would enable the two airlines to plan ahead. The split would be based on current and expected cargo and passenger business. The airlines needed clear long-term guides so they could plan their equipment and manpower needs.

Changes in the air policy are considered necessary to deal with the growing air passenger market.

DISCUSS AGREEMENTS

The government has concluded new air agreements with Germany, Italy and China in the last year. Talks are underway with the U.S. on a new bilateral agreement.

Similar discussions are expected with such countries as Spain, the Netherlands, Lebanon, Switzerland and Yugoslavia.

The government wants air policy clearly stated so that when new routes are awarded there will be no political bickering between CP Air and Air Canada.

A long battle between them for a new route to Milan has helped spur the current policy review. Mr. Marchand has said he will announce which airline gets Milan at the time the air policy is made public.

Under the air policy, competition between Canadian carriers on individual routes is prohibited. Each airline has exclusive rights to its own routes.

HAWKINS

... just returned

SAVE CHILDREN WORKERS TO REPORT ON VIETNAM

The London director of the Save the Children Fund will visit Victoria May 23 to report to the provincial committee on assistance to children in Vietnam.

Lt.-Col. J. V. Hawkins has just returned from an inspection tour of Vietnam SCF children's centres and village clinics where he consulted government officials about expansion of children's services.

Of special concern is the development of on-going programs for the relief of children in South Vietnam, North Vietnam and areas controlled by the provisional revolutionary government in South Vietnam.

Hawkins will be accompanied by two SCF executive members, Thomas Phipps, financial director and Haakan Landelius, secretary-general of the Swedish organization.

Landelius will report on programs operated by his country in North Vietnam areas and those controlled by the provisional revolutionary government.

The representatives will also attend the general meeting of the foundation's B.C. branch at St. John's Shaughnessy Anglican Church, at 8 p.m. Thursday, in Vancouver.

Digest Founders Retire

CHAPPAQUA, N.Y. (AP) — Dewitt and Lila Acheson Wallace have relinquished their absolute control of The Reader's Digest and thus ended an era of unparalleled journalistic success.

Fifty-one years ago, they launched the pocket-size publication with an $1,800 investment and an unshaken belief that man can succeed if he tries hard enough. There were 1,500 charter subscribers.

Today, the Digest sells 17.75 million copies in the United States alone, plus 11.5 million in 13 languages and 24 international editions.

A four-color page of advertising goes for $62,000, more than any other magazine, and last year's advertising revenues totalled $71.7 million. The May issue's revenue was a record $8.875 million, a spokesman said.

STEPPING ASIDE

The Wallaces said they were stepping aside as co-chairmen and naming Walter Wood Hitesman, 54, as president and chief operating officer. The Wallaces are designated founders and become corporate directors.

Hitesman had been first vice-president, rising through the ranks since 1948.

A graduate of Louisiana State University, where he edited the Daily Reveille, Hitesman was a major in charge of U.S. Marine Corps publications in the Second World War. He is a Baton Rouge, La., native and lives with his wife Betty in Bedford, N.Y.

As part of the corporate realignment, editor-in-chief Hobart Lewis, who also is chief executive officer, relinquishes the title of president but becomes chairman.

TEL AVIV (UPI) — To the strains of "give peace a chance," self-styled Israeli peace pilot Abie Nathan began broadcasts to the Middle East today from a freighter anchored off the Israeli coast.

The peace ship will be a facility for those who believe that people should live as neighbors, that there is still hope, that there is a chance to remove the frustrations, suspicions, hates... and replace them with reason and understanding," Nathan said.

phone over to a Canadian disc jockey called John, one of 16 crew members aboard. At his disposal were 10,000 pop records that would be liberally played between the peace messages, said Nathan's Tel Aviv attorney, Arye Marinsky.

Nathan's maiden broadcast marked the climax to a two-year effort to man and finance an off-shore Mediterranean station that he said "will have been approached by dozens of Israeli and foreign advertisers seeking to book air time, Marinsky said.

Before the 1967 Middle East War and again soon after, Nathan flew from Israel to Egypt in a single-engine plane, proclaiming his determination to set a personal example of brotherhood between

Remorseful Thief Returns the Loot

MAYBROOK, N.Y. — A Maybrook merchant whose father was robbed more than 10 years ago says he has received a cheque from one of the robbers.

The cheque, from a northern New Jersey man, covered the $80 stolen, plus interest, said Joseph Hill.

The unidentified culprit was a youth when he and some friends took money from the cash register of Hill's General Store while owner John Hill had his back turned, the younger Hill said. The elder Hill died last year.

Joseph Hill said a letter accompanying the cheque said the New Jersey man had heard recently of the elder Hill's death and wanted to set things straight.

OTTAWA — Invited to the television interview room to discuss his speech on capital punishment, Prime Minister Trudeau said: "You haven't been inviting me down here very often lately. Is it because the prime minister's popularity has gone lower with the press?" "No sir," a reporter replied, "You're popularity with the press is no lower than it's ever been."

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — Paul Robeson, the actor and singer who gained political notoriety when he refused to sign a statement saying he was not a Communist, was awarded an honorary degree by his alma mater, Rutgers University, Thursday. His son, Paul Jr., 45, of Brooklyn, N.Y., accepted the doctor of humane letters degree. Robeson, 75, remained at his home in Philadelphia, where he is confined by illness.

PORTLAND, Me. — Mr. and Mrs. Sigmund Dyro have been assessed $135.30 by the city for residential sewer lines — installed more than a century ago. "We're not going to pay it," said Mrs. Dyro. It was sent after the city combed through its books and dug up some uncollected assessments.

PARIS — Henry Kissinger met President Georges Pompidou of France for 90 minutes today to prepare for Pompidou's talks with President Nixon in Iceland, May 31-June 1.

BONN — West Germany's opposition Christian Union Parties Thursday chose Karl Carstens, a relative political unknown, for the pivotal post of opposition leader in the parliament. Carstens, 58, succeeds Rainer C. Barzel, who resigned last week after 10 years in the parliamentary leadership job.

LOS ANGELES — Actress Jane Fonda and a former prisoner of war clashed at a lunch Thursday. Later the Army capt. Mark Smith said he had been forced by his captors to listen every day to the radio broadcasts from Hanoi made by Miss Fonda. Smith said the "impression she gave the troops that were doing the fighting was that she didn't want them to load those bombs. And to me that's advocating that American soldiers commit sabotage or mutiny against their officers."

Smith told reporters following his exchange with Miss Fonda that "I think that anyone who goes to a foreign country where we are involved in a conflict, and aids and abets the enemy... is a traitor."

NEW YORK — Sharon Rote has won an unconditional divorce from sportscaster Kyle Rote, former running back for New York Giants football team. Married twice — in Juarez, Mexico, on Aug. 2, 1965, and in New York City on their fifth anniversary — the couple had been separated since Nov. 15, 1971.

OTTAWA — Nobel prize-winning physicist Gerhard Herzberg has been named to succeed the late Lester B. Pearson as chancellor of Carleton University.

$ Million Goof Wins $10 Bet

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal MP lost a $10 bet and Statistics Canada officials were red-faced.

The bureau, national authority on numbers, had erred by 100 times in its calculation of its own budget's share of the government's spending estimates for this year.

The embarrassing bungle emerged as chief statistician Sylvia Ostry completed a fact-filled report on the bureau to the Commons finance committee Thursday.

Arguing that taxpayers get good value from the bureau, she told the committee that its cost for 1973-74 — $73.3 million — amounted to only four-thousandths of one per cent of the total government estimates of $18.4 billion.

That didn't look right to John Harney (NDP—Scarborough West), who put New Democrat researcher Boris Celovsky to work.

He wouldn't presume to be a mathematician, Harney interjected a moment later, but the proposition was four-tenths, not four-thousandths.

That provoked a five-minute argument among MPs and bureau officials, who finally admitted Harney was right but only after Judd Buchan (L—London West) had staked $10 on the bureau's accuracy.

Harney and Celovsky split the winnings. "We always publish figures with a margin of error," Mrs. Ostry said.

Guards Didn't Like Bathroom Art Language

WASHINGTON (WP)—Sal Alonge, an art student at Northern Virginia Community College in suburban Washington, believes that the graffiti scribbled on college bathroom walls is a legitimate form of art.

That's why he decided last week to display at a campus art show a large square of plywood—entitled Bathroom Wall—that prominently displayed a stainless steel toilet paper dispenser, some four-letter words, and a dozen familiar graffiti phrases.

But the school's security guards, who do not share Alonge's taste in art promptly confiscated the plywood "painting" and locked it in security guard headquarters.

"We got a couple of complaints from people who saw the painting," said officer Raymond Souza. "I took one look at it and I didn't think it should be in a place where my mother or somebody else's mother could walk by and see it."

So Souza and another officer took the plywood display away. Alonge, who moments before had carefully put his latest art work into place, was infuriated to find it gone. "They had no right to take it," said Alonge, a senior art student. "That kind of art is personal. If you like it, fine. If you don't like it, fine. But I think each person should at least be allowed to make up his own mind."

Alonge, who received awards in the show for two paintings and first place for an outdoor sculpture called "Tension," said he wanted to see what would happen when students are exposed to a blank piece of plywood, in a bathroom.

"I've always been interested in graffiti," said Alonge, who left his Bathroom Wall in a campus men's room for four days. "I believe (graffiti) is as much a part of our folk lore as anything else and I wanted to let it speak for itself."

Peace Men Split On Cause of Crash

SAIGON (CP) — The four member countries of the international truce team have reached fundamentally different conclusions over the nature and causes of the April 7 crash of a peacekeeping helicopter.

Sources in the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) said today the Hungarian and Polish delegations insist that the crash, which killed nine persons, was an accident and not the result of anti-aircraft fire from the ground.

Canadian and Indonesian representatives have concluded that the helicopter was shot down over a "contested area" while on an observer mission to Lao Bao, in the northwestern corner of South Vietnam.

A second helicopter fired on in the incident was able to land without casualties.

Killed in the crash was Capt. Charles Laviolette of Quebec City, two American pilots, a Filipino crew member, two Hungarians and an Indonesian and two Viet Cong representatives. Sources say the Canadians and Indonesians found that the pilot of the accompanying helicopter had radioed nearby Quang Tri saying: "He's been hit by a missile and he's going down."

DEPLORES FAILURE

One ICCS source said this is "the single most important incident we've dealt with; it's unfortunate we couldn't come to a common conclusion."

The report will be formally discussed when the commission holds a regular meeting next Wednesday. But sources indicate it may be some time before discussion of the hefty document is completed.

Hungarian spokesman has said in the past that the cause of the crash was probably the pilot's attempt to elevate too quickly, putting too much strain on the rotor. This position is likely to have been restated in the report.

There are reported to have been some differences in the views of the Canadians and Indonesians but sources said these were on "matters of detail and nuance."

The Polish and Hungarian positions, while contained in separate statements, are basically similar.

The two East European countries have been referring to the crash as an "accident" since the time it happened, while the Canadians and Indonesians have always called it an "incident."

The Viet Cong, who claim control over the area where the crash took place, also describe the crash as an unfortunate accident.

AGREE ON COURSE

Sources say there was unanimous agreement that the aircraft were off course at the time of the shooting.

"Frankly I am doubtful whether there will ever be an agreement reached by the full ICCS on what happened," one commission official said.

Biggest Boozers 21 to 24

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Heavy imbibing and all types of drinking problems are highest among men in their early 20s and not the stereotyped middle-aged skid road bums, a 12-year study of American alcohol use shows.

The youngest age group surveyed, between 21 and 24, experienced the greatest prevalence of all drinking problems, reported Don Cahalan, a behavioral scientist with the University of California School of Public Health.

There is a general tendency for individuals, particularly those of upper economic status, to move out of the drinking and problem drinking categories as they approach their 30s, the study found.

THIS TIME, NO WRITE-OFF

SASKATOON (CP) — This time, John Allan Sokochoff won't be writing his own pre-sentencing report.

Sokochoff, 20, of Saskatoon, was back in court Wednesday less than a month after earning himself a conditional discharge.

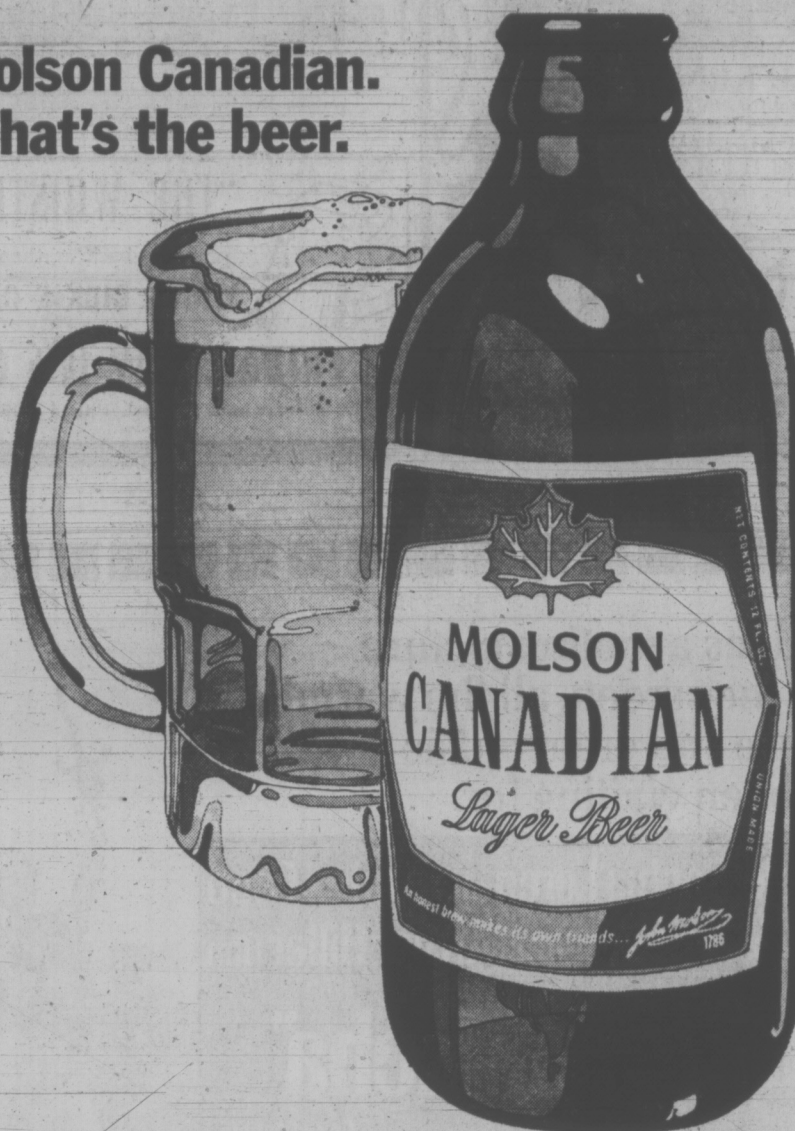

He pleaded guilty last month to possession of marijuana. After he objected to pre-sentencing reports prepared by probation officer Mel Robinson, Judge Samuel Goldstein told him to write his own report. He did.

Sokochoff recommended that he be given a conditional discharge. It was granted.

But Wednesday Sokochoff faced another judge, R. H. King, who told him: "You won't be writing your own report this time."

And preparing the pre-sentence report is Mel Robinson. Sokochoff pleaded guilty to cultivating marijuana plants. Police said he was arrested with 202 marijuana plants in his possession.

Dief Leaves Homestead To Fund Scholarship

EDMONTON (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker has donated the family homestead to the University of Saskatchewan, on two conditions.

Revenues from the farm must be used to found a scholarship to encourage public speaking and debating.

In addition, the land must be maintained "for all time as an example of the pioneer homesteading days of the first years of this century."

Diefenbaker said the land, when leased, provides a net income of about $1,000 a year which should provide a scholarship for not less than 99 years.

Calgary Sets Tax

CALGARY (CP) — City council decided Thursday to increase the municipal tax rate by only 0.3 mills to 68.9 mills from 68.6.

The effect on the average homeowner with a house assessed at $7,000 would be to raise taxes $2.10 to $482.30.

MDA Disappears

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. (CP) — The unexplained disappearance of 471 capsules of the drug MDA from RCMP offices resulted in the acquittal of a man charged with trafficking in the drug.

Russell Richard Reynen, 23, of Fort McMurray, was fined $750 for possession of the controlled drug when he appeared in district court.

Court was told RCMP found 481 capsules of MDA in his possession March 12 but two containers, with all but 10 of the capsules sent to a police laboratory, had vanished from the RCMP offices.

Incentives Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Liberal leader I. H. Asper says welfare costs could be cut drastically by eliminating some of the government bureaucracy and increasing incentives for self-help groups.

He said self-help groups, service clubs and similar organizations should be given more responsibility for welfare funding, administration and incentive programs.

Cessna Overturns

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP) — A Cessna 185 aircraft overturned and sank on take-off from Schist Lake in Flin Flon Thursday morning, taking the life of a woman passenger.

Three others aboard the single engine plane, including the pilot, Robert Uhrin, managed to escape from the sinking craft. They were taken to hospital in Flin Flon where Uhrin was detained for observation.

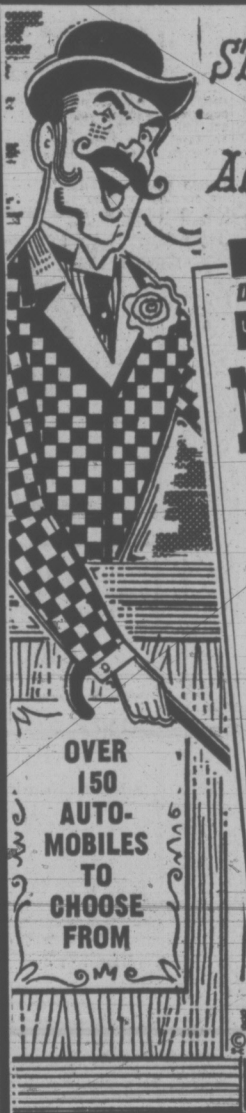

Damage Suspension

EDMONTON (CP) — Twenty workers installing new equipment in the downtown Edmonton telephone exchange have been suspended by Northern Electric Co. Ltd. after some equipment was damaged last week.

A spokesman for the men, who belong to the Communications Workers of Canada Union, said the men were suspended by Northern on Tuesday for two days when Northern delivered an ultimatum for the men to come forward with information regarding the damaged equipment — or face suspension.

Strides Made in Heart Fight

In the annual report for 1972 of the American Heart Association, the experts say that although they cannot yet announce that they have found the cure for heart disease, thousands of lives are being saved by research advances of recent years.

The experts say that infants who years ago would not have lived into adult life are now being saved by heart surgery. Also, last year 50,000 people had operations in which a heart-lung machine kept the person alive while the surgeon worked.

In the last 10 years, methods have been devised to start up many hearts that had stopped beating, with the help of a cardiopulmonary resuscitation, and thousands of such almost-dead people have been "brought back to life."

In 1965, hospitals began to install coronary care units, and today nearly half of this country's hospitals have such units. With them, the heart attack death rate has been cut by 30 per cent.

In recent years, physicians have had the advantage of an array of new drugs to help them to control most forms of high blood pressure, thereby lowering a patient's risk of premature heart attack or stroke.

In a recent issue of Family Planning Digest, I read that girls under 18 can consent to birth control services, without having to get parental approval, in 20 of the 50 states. Also, in 39 of the 50, unmarried girls who have reached 18 can consent to their own contraceptive care. A recent survey showed that there is "a strong trend" in giving minors access to effective birth control services on their own consent and initiative.

Also, the survey showed, most courts will rule that a "completely emancipated" minor can consent to his or her own medical treatment.

Emancipated minors are those young people who live apart from their parents, support themselves, and control their own lives. Some states consider a young person emancipated who lives apart from his or her parents even if the parents contribute to the youngster's support.

Barons of Beef Scarce in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Government restrictions and economic problems have made beef a rare delicacy in this South American country. Many Chileans have worked out their own quick farm-to-table supply system, with everybody getting his pound or so of flesh along the way.

A carpenter and his three married brothers, for example, decided their families would not spend last Christmas without their traditional steaks.

So they hopped into his pickup truck, drove 120 miles into the country and illegally purchased a live steer from a farmer. He slaughtered it for them in the pasture that night.

The brothers loaded the carcass onto the truck, covered it with bales of hay and drove back home over side roads to avoid detection.

In the city, a butcher friend quartered it, in exchange for a choice cut. The operation was done in the butcher's closed shop at night. A watchman also got a piece of the meat in exchange for his silence.

Black market operations are so widespread that all kinds of establishments, including some houses of prostitution, have turned into fronts for selling clandestine beef to trusted customers.

The black market price of beef is sometimes five or seven times the official price. The leftist government of President Salvador Allende has forced the official price down, from $1.60 a pound before he took office in December 1970 to the current $1.01 a pound.

In the same period, Chilean production of beef has remained static at 127,000 tons a year. Not counting contraband from neighboring countries, about 58,000 tons are expected to be imported this year.

Butcher shops are closed more days than they are open under official regulations aimed at stretching meat supplies.

When the Frei government increased beefless days to one week a month in January, 1969, the illicit business started to thrive.

1,700 MILES FOR JUST $10

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — In this time of rising gasoline prices, 74-year-old Arthur Farrall has become a fossil fuel dropout. And it has paid off handsomely, he says.

In the year since he built his electric-powered "Green Hornet," Farrall has driven about 1,700 miles at a cost of $10.20.

He says he can drive almost soundlessly on the streets of East Lansing at a cost of only six-tenths of a cent a mile.

"When I retired, I needed something to do, so I decided to build an electric car," said Farrall, former chairman of the Michigan State University agricultural engineering department.

He says it was simple. He bought an engineless 1961 Volkswagen and installed two 2½-horsepower electric motors.

"It's great," he says. "No money for tune-ups, oil changes or exhaust problems, only the price of plugging it into the socket in the garage."

Under the right conditions, the Green Hornet travels up to 40 miles an hour, Farrall says.

"I can cruise at about 35 miles per hour with no trouble at all."

He says he can go about 25 miles on each battery charge.

Crown Fails To Prove Case

CALGARY (CP) — Walter Bruce Ruck, former president of Kamalta Explorations Ltd., was acquitted in Alberta Supreme Court of issuing a false statement.

He was charged after a company news release Sept. 25, 1969, stated Kamalta had a net daily oil production of more than 1,000 barrels in mid-September.

Actual production was about 580 barrels a day.

Chief Justice J. V. H. Milvain said the crown failed to prove Ruck knew the information was false and intended to mislead the public. The firm is now bankrupt.

Soil, Sun and Water
Keys to Window Boxes

This long holiday weekend will be the opportunity for thousands of planters, tubs and window boxes to be filled with flowering plants to last all summer.

They will add gaiety and the touch of realism to otherwise sterile apartment balconies, and additional color to patios, sun decks and secluded relaxation areas at ground level. Artificial flowers can never take their place.

Success depends, first, perhaps on the soil mixture for it must be both retentive of moisture and porous. Not impossible, since humus has these two qualities. Soil made from composted material is ideal. Mix it equally with garden soil. Apartment dwellers may have to rely on purchased packaged soil. Try to get potting soil, not a very fine peaty mixture primarily for one type of plant.

Second point for success is to match the plants with the location.

As set out in a recent column on bedding annuals, few will flower in shade. Most want plenty of sun, others do well facing east or west.

Geraniums though not annuals, are used for planters. They love hot sunshine. Equally so, the petunias and marigolds, nasturtiums and ageratum. Where only morning sun is obtained, use lobelias, nemesias, schizanthus. Facing west in hot afternoon sun, the sunlovers will thrive.

On balconies facing north with only early summer morning and late evening sunshine, there can be plentiful color by using planters and tubs of tuberous begonias, pansies and nicotines, keeping the latter near a wall to avoid wind.

If the soil mixture is fresh, that is not worn out by plant growing, don't add fertilizers at planting time. Wait until flowering is well started, then add a teaspoonful to a gallon of water, giving this in alternate weeks.

Use enough plants to each planter for a filled effect in about a month's time. See that the soil level is at least an inch below the rim of the container, more with really large planters. You don't want to lose soil at watering time.

When you water, give it slowly and gently so that it remains among the soil particles. Only you will know how often the watering will be needed. It will depend on the kind of plants, the soil, location, and even the type of planters.

Once they are established and growing, plentiful watering as seldom as possible, will give the best results.

On apartment balconies, find out where the surplus water goes when it runs off your balcony! It won't be any more welcome down below than that from above reaching down to you.

SOLUTION TUESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

There are certain repetitive card combinations in a suit which, if led up to by a defender, will give declarer a trick that he could not, or might not, have made on his own power. As a simple illustration, if one possesses an A-Q of a suit, and if his left hand opponent leads that suit, declarer will make a trick with the queen via a "free finesse;" whereas if declarer leads that suit and finessees his queen, the queen will win the trick just 50 per cent of the time.

In this deal, there is featured a card combination in which declarer would have made only one trick if he had led the suit himself. But he played the hand in such a manner that he forced the opponents to lead that suit. As a result, he made his game-going trick.

Both sides vulnerable, South deals.

SOUTH
♠ 10 5 2		♥ A 9 3
♦ A J 6 4		♣ A 10 9

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
3 NT Pass 5 ♠ Pass
Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

After winning the opening club lead with his ace, declarer promptly led another club and ruffed it. He then returned to the South hand via a trump to his ace (picking up East's queen en route), after which he ruffed his remaining club. The king of trumps then gathered in West's remaining trump.

The king and ace of hearts were cashed next, and a third heart was then led, West winning with his jack. If West now led a club (or, in theory, a heart if he had one), South would ruff in dummy while discarding from his own hand of spades from his own hand.

From here in, declarer's only loser would be a spade.

So West had no choice but to lead a low spade, South playing the four-spot from dummy. Upon winning with his king, East returned a spade — and declarer now had himself two spade tricks (the result would have been the same if East had returned a club or a heart, which he really should have done).

Had declarer led spades himself, he would have made but one spade trick. If he had led the deuce, and inserted the board's jack, East's king would have won the trick. A spade return would now have entrapped South's 10. Or, if declarer led the spade 10 initially, West would have covered with the queen, and dummy's ace would have won the trick. Dummy's J-4 would now be entrapped by East's K-8.

"Yes, they're my three grandchildren," said Don, slipping the photo back into his wallet. "Spaced one year apart, with the girl in the middle."

Peter smiled. "Nice and close together. I always think that's good for the kids. How old are they now?"

"You like puzzles," replied Don. "Brian's the youngest. If you add his age to the cube of Bob's you get the square of my age."

How old was Ann?

First Mention In Soviet Press

MOSCOW (WP) — The official Soviet press finally broke its long silence on the Watergate affair. Literary Gazette, a weekly newspaper for the intelligentsia, carried a 500-word story under the headline, Watergate Affair: What's Happening?

The unsigned article is carefully worded. Though it implies a good deal, it does not state that the White House or President Nixon had any involvement in the case.

Soviet Editors acknowledge privately the Watergate has been too complicated for them to handle. Their difficulties stem from the Soviet philosophy of journalism, which dictates that all stories on a subject should reflect the current line.

The Communist Party has decided that the line on America should be friendly and upbeat. President Nixon is to be treated as a statesman-like partner in détente.

The line serves two purposes: To try to flatter the United States, and to reinforce the impression that the party has acted correctly by deciding to make friends with the United States.

Whatever the explanation, Soviet newspaper readers had only the vaguest notion of Watergate until Wednesday's article. The Literary Gazette story may be a sort of insurance policy against the possibility that Watergate will get still worse, perhaps even threatening the Nixon-Brezhnev summit conference scheduled for Washington in June.

Scandal Baffles Communist Side

BELGRADE (WP) — Soviet representatives in Eastern Europe have told westerners — the Watergate scandal appears to them to be a "conspiracy" by powerful forces in America opposed to détente with Moscow.

The plot theory has been floated by a number of Soviet journalists and Communist editors regularly based in Belgrade, Bucharest, Warsaw and Moscow. According to the theory, reactionary American elements which have never accepted the rapprochement with the Communists initiated by Nixon have organized a plot to discredit him.

The Watergate case seems to have baffled and dismayed communist representatives. Nixon is an admired figure in all official circles of Eastern Europe. His name is linked to pragmatic American efforts to increase trade and tone down the ideological debate between east and west. Tangible proof of the Soviet Union's confidence in Nixon's ability to survive the Watergate crisis was given last weekend when dates for Soviet Party Leader Leonid I. Brezhnev's visit to the United States next month were announced.

The concern in Communist circles over Nixon's position was perhaps summed up best by a Polish editor who was explaining the scant coverage of the Watergate affair in the Polish news media.

"From our standpoint, Richard Nixon is the best possible American president in the current circumstances, and we don't want to see him embarrassed."

Soviet proponents of the conspiracy theory are unimpressed by evidence that the earliest assailants of the administration's handling of Watergate were newspapers which supported east-west bridge building even before Nixon did.

For instance, one Soviet journalist insisted that the Washington Post must have had powerful forces supporting it in order to have conducted the kind of investigation it did.

"It couldn't have done it on its own," he asserted. At the same time the journalist suggested that "a Rockefeller" could stop the process of détente if he wanted to. He did not specify whether he was referring to Gov. Nelson Rockefeller or to Chase Manhattan's David Rockefeller, who is probably better known in the Soviet Union as a symbol of American capitalist clout.

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Watergate bugging and the burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist were part of an elaborate, continuous campaign of illegal and quasi-legal undercover operations conducted by the Nixon Administration since 1969, according to highly-placed sources in the executive branch.

The campaign included political burglaries, buggings, spying and sabotage conducted under White House auspices, according to the sources. Most of these operations have not yet been publicly revealed.

Although the undercover operations became most intense during the 1972 presidential campaign, such activities as the Watergate bugging and the Ellsberg burglary, which previously had appeared to be isolated, were regarded in the White House as components of a continuing program of covert activity, according to the sources.

The clandestine operations, they said, were at various times aimed at radical leaders, student demonstrators, reporters, Democratic candidates for president and vice-president and the Congress, and administration aides suspected of leaking information to the press.

In one of them, it was revealed that former White House deputy John Ehrlichman had the health records of Sen. Thomas Eagleton several weeks before information about him was leaked to the news media.

It could not be determined how Ehrlichman got the records, which described the nervous condition and shock treatment that led to Eagleton's withdrawal from the 1972 campaign.

Ramsey Clark, a former attorney-general, has said Eagleton's health records were in FBI files and reliable sources said the material from the files was provided to White House and Nixon campaign aides by Robert Mardian, former assistant attorney-general.

Eagleton refused to provide copies of his records even to the presidential candidate, Sen. George McGovern, after the story broke.

The sources said that many of the covert activities, although political in objective, were conducted under the guise of "national security" and that some of the records relating to them are believed to have been destroyed.

Some of the activities were conducted by the FBI, the Secret Service and special teams working for the White House and Justice Department, according to the sources.

Most of the activities were carried out under the direct supervision of members of President Nixon's innermost circle, among them H.R. Haldeman, Ehrlichman, John Dean, former attorney-general John Mitchell, and former assistant attorney-general C. Mardian.

Although most of the clandestine operations are shrouded in secrecy, they are also known to include:

—The use of the Secret Service to obtain information on the private life of at least one Democratic presidential candidate in 1972.

—The use of paid provocateurs to encourage violence at anti-war demonstrations early in the first Nixon administration, and again in the 1972 presidential campaign.

—Undercover political activities against persons regarded as opponents of the Nixon administration.

The activities were conducted by "suicide squads" in the FBI — a bureau term for teams of agents engaged in sensitive missions which, if revealed, would be disavowed by the FBI and the White House.

—The use of paid-for-hire "vigilante squads" by the White House and Justice Department to conduct illegal wiretapping, infiltrate radical organizations for purposes of provocation and engage in political sabotage.

The "vigilante squads" were made up of professional wiretappers and ex-CIA and ex-FBI agents.

One such "vigilante squad," under the supervision of former White House aides E. Howard Hunt and G. Gordon Liddy, conducted the Watergate bugging and the burglary at the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

The Watergate grand jury reportedly is examining other undercover activities by the squad, including another burglary that the team is suspected of committing.

According to one highly-placed source in the executive branch, — undercover operations by the Hunt-Liddy squad were transferred from the White House to the Committee for the Re-Election of the president under an arrangement worked out by Haldeman and Mitchell.

The transfer of the squad from the White House to the re-election committee was made to gear up for the upcoming presidential campaign in which "dirty tricks," spying and deceptions would be a basic part, the sources said.

Some of the records relating to the undercover program are believed to have been destroyed in the immediate wake of the Watergate bugging arrests last June 17.

Other records were destroyed last month, when it became apparent that some of the activities might come to light in the renewed grand jury investigation of the bugging and related matters, according to one source.

To prevent further disclosure of the activities, the sources reported the White House has promulgated "national security" guidelines for use in the Watergate investigation that are designed, at least in part, to prevent testimony about the undercover operations by those with knowledge of them.

Several sources described the political espionage and sabotage as the logical extension of operations established long before.

"It grew out of an atmosphere. This way of life was not new... there have been fairly broad (illegal and quasi-legal) activities from the beginning of the administration. I didn't know where 'national security' ended and political espionage started," one source said.

According to this source, the activities were aimed at whatever individual or groups the White House perceived as a threat at any given moment.

"First it was radicals," he said, "then it was reporters and leaking White House aides, then the Democrats.

They all got the same treatment: bugging, infiltration, burglary, spying."

What has been described by Nixon committee sources as an "obsession" with secrecy and manipulation extended even to minute details of the campaign.

Pay or Die (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. A well-acted and realistically brutal account of the Mafia's activities in New York City during the years Shenandoah (xx), on 7 at 3:30. James Stewart stars in this sentimental 1965 movie about a Virginia farmer's effort to keep his family out of the Civil War.

The Spiral Staircase (xxx), on 4 at 8:30. A golden oldie that scared the daylight out of 1946 audiences. High Ratings Put M*A*S*H Into Prime-Time Position

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

WASHINGTON — The safest bet for the next season on U.S. television is that M*A*S*H will be very high in the ratings. This situation comedy about a mobile army surgical hospital (M*A*S*H) in the Korean war will be moved to 9:30 p.m. Saturdays. This means it will inherit the huge audiences of All in the Family and will be followed by the very popular Mary Tyler Moore (all on CBS).

Future home for M*A*S*H is now occupied by Bridget Loves Bernie, which has only one distinction: never in all television has a program with such a high rating (it was in seventh place) been cancelled. CBS, officially, made noises about the audience being lost between 8:30 and 9 p.m. But, unofficially, the kill order was based on two other reasons. The first is the dreadful quality of one of the stalest jokes in entertainment (mixed marriage). The second is the condemnation from Jewish groups about the stereotype characters and the casual jokes about a Jewish man's marriage to a Roman Catholic woman.

The decision, then, came from the conviction that the networks had little to lose in audiences and had much to gain in quality. Or, in terms of the current gag around the halls of CBS, a lecture on the mating habits of the lepidoptera would be a big rating if placed between All in the Family and Mary Tyler Moore.

High ratings will certainly be something new for M*A*S*H. It was close to cancellation in January. Its place among prime time programs had been as high as 22nd, the second week of the season but by year's end it had dropped to 60th place. It did pick up during the "second season," mainly because it no longer had to follow a disaster called Anna and the King.

Still, those who were attracted to the program liked it very, very much. It is based on one of the most hilarious motion pictures of recent years and it has developed its own set of laconic, tough and compassionate characters.

The chief mischief maker is Alan Alda, who plays Capt. Benjamin Franklin (Hawkeye) Pierce. No question is ever raised about his extraordinary competence as a surgeon. The problems arise out of his contempt for military decorum. He's just as cool in the midst of some well-motivated prank as he is at the operating table.

Alan is the son of actor Robert Alda and he entered the theatre despite his father's best efforts to keep him out. "You lack the energy to be a good actor," father told son. "But I have plenty of energy," said son to father and, at the age of 16 he began working in Summer Stock in Barnesville, Pa. By the time he was a junior at Fordham University, son Alan was travelling to Rome to work on stage with father and to Amsterdam to work with him on television.

He's now established in theatre, motion pictures and television but prefers, when not working, the quiet, suburban life of Leonia, N.J., with his wife and their three daughters, ages 14, 12 and 10.

By long distance, at least (since his father lives in Rome), Alan is willing to admit that an actor does need an extraordinary amount of energy.

Competing with Hawkeye Pierce for the title of the best and most disrespectful surgeon in the Korean war is Capt. John F. X. (Trapper John) McIntyre. This role has resurrected the career of big Wayne Rogers. He left Birmingham, Ala., to begin studies at Princeton University and graduated with a degree in history. He took up acting after three years in the U.S. navy, studying at the New York neighborhood Playhouse and with Sandy Meisner. He even fitted his 6 foot 3 and 190 pounds into dance costumes to study with Martha Graham.

His TV career, however, got off to something less than a splendid start during the 1960-61 season. Wayne and Robert Bray starred in a western series, Stagecoach West, which lasted 38 episodes and one season.

Producer Gene Reynolds wisely softened the characters of Hawkeye and Trapper John for television, but the biggest change was made in the character of nurse Major Margaret (Hot Lips) Houlihan. In the motion picture, she had been all competence, army regulations and an imperious — if fallible — sex symbol. For TV, Loretta Swit added some devilment and a lack of opposition to the machinations of the surgical team.

Carried over from the motion picture is Gary Burghoff and his distinctive interpretation of "Radar" O'Reilly, a corporal. He has such gifts as extra-sensory perception, acute vision and long-range hearing. He also has a talent for scrounging, particularly the cigars and brandy that belong to Lt. Col. Henry Blake (McLean Stevenson).

One character that has been developing through the series is Klinger, a quite sane enlisted man who wishes to be banished from the army. Jamie Farr plays Klinger, who keeps dressing like a woman, with hope that he'll be discharged as a psycho-neurotic.

His appearance in skirt and high heels caused one visiting general to ask Hawkeye in exasperation: "Do you know one of the men is wearing a skirt?"

Hawkeye, dead-panned replied: "Why not? He's got the legs for it."

With next year's success certain, producer Reynolds is planning no major changes. He reasons: "The show's action derives from the gaw work, which the M*A*S*H staff tries to forget by crazy after-hours antics. Somehow, these help them stay sane."

Their attempts to preserve sanity provide the television audience with some of TV's rare, but genuine, comedy.

DAVID HEMMINGS stars in Antonioni's award-winning film, Blow-Up, shown for the first time on television (minus nude and sex scenes) on Thursday, May 24 at 9 p.m. on Channel 7.

THOUSANDS PREFER FICTION

NEW YORK (AP) — The televised Watergate hearings spent more than five hours Thursday angering game-show fans and those who find more drama in soap opera than in the hunt for the truth in the packed Senate Caucus Room in Washington.

The start of the hearings before the Senate committee marked the first time since February, 1966, that all three United States networks televised all or part of a Senate hearing live.

"Political pressure from the White House was conveyed to me in January, 1973, by John Caulfield to remain silent, take executive clemency by going off to prison quietly," McCord said softly.

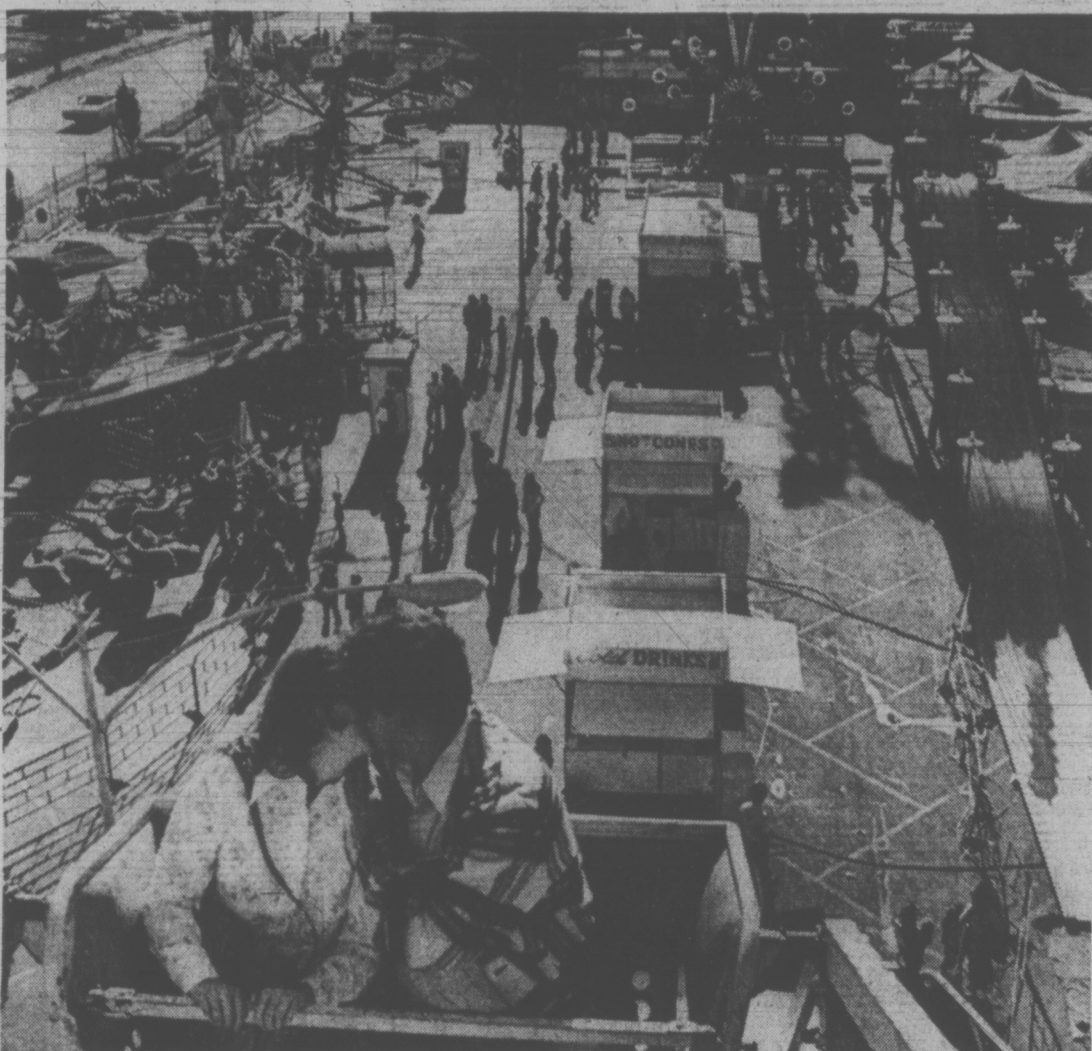

"And I was told that while there I would receive financial aid and later rehabilitation and a job," he continued. "I was further told in a January meeting in 1973 with Caulfield that the president of the United States was aware of our meeting, that the result of our meeting would be conveyed to the president, and at a future meeting there would likely be a personal message from the president himself."

Committee chairman Sam Ervin, D-N.C., interrupted as McCord read from a prepared statement to caution that the testimony was purely hearsay.

"The testimony of Mr. McCord as to what was told to him by John Caulfield would not be accepted in a court of law," to connect the president with what Mr. Caulfield was doing," Ervin said.

"But it is admissible to show whether or not Mr. Caulfield is a party to any agreement to attempt to suppress information about what is popularly known

Copters in War

LONDON (AP) — Royal Navy helicopters have begun flying missions over British trawlers within Ireland's disputed 50-mile fishing zone, the foreign office announced today.

POLLUTING 'LICENCE'

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. was fined $1,000 in provincial court today for polluting the air around its plant here.

In passing sentence, Judge Joseph McMahon said Ford was using the court as a "licensing bureau" to permit it to continue breaking the law.

Judge McMahon said Ford had done everything it could to comply with provincial legislation short of closing the foundry. He said Ford will continue polluting the air because technology cannot stop it.

ICCS Money Crisis

Times News Services

The International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) is facing "an emergency financial crisis," commission sources said today.

The sources added that the commission no longer has enough funds to pay its private contractors, although, so far, none of the contractors has cut off services.

It is understood that the ICCS owes almost $750,000 to Air America, which supplies all air services for the commission.

The ICCS has asked the four parties to the Paris peace agreement — the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the Viet Cong — to match their original contribution of 4.5 million French francs apiece as an interim measure. There has been no reply from any of the parties. The issue was to be discussed at a meeting of the commission today.

In Paris, U.S. foreign affairs adviser Henry Kissinger and North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho Thursday began and ended in a show of smiles and handshakes their first closed-door meeting to salvage the precarious Vietnam cease-fire agreement they negotiated

BELFAST (CP) — Four soldiers died in a car bomb explosion in Omagh today after one of Northern Ireland's bloodiest nights in years. The 24-hour death toll stood at eight.

The other four were a cattle dealer shot near the Irish republic, a Catholic killed while playing darts, a sniper shot by an army marksman, and a 14-year-old Catholic schoolgirl who died in the hospital today after being wounded in a gun-battle Thursday night.

The girl, Eileen Mackin, and a friend were both hit when gunmen opened fire on a motorized army patrol in Belfast's Springfield area. The car bomb caused the highest death toll in a single incident for British troops since they were first called in to help combat the sectarian violence that erupted in Northern Ireland four years ago.

The bomb exploded as the soldiers got into the booby-trapped car. It left a two-foot-deep crater in the ground and scattered the men's bodies all over the hotel parking lot and a nearby field.

All the soldiers were off duty at the time.

Earlier in the night a 22-year-old cattle dealer, Michael Leonard, was shot with in sight of the Irish republic border while fleeing from police in County Fermanagh.

Police chased his car as the man ignored repeated orders to halt. He was finally brought down only a few hundred yards from the frontier and died in hospital later.

In London, airline pilots scheduled a meeting to decide their action in face of an IRA threat to wreck Belfast's Aldergrove Airport and any planes using it.

A statement from the militant IRA Provisionals said they regard the airport as a target and warned crews and passengers their lives are in danger.

Two bombs were found on the runways early Thursday. One exploded, causing slight damage. The other was defused.

COLD BEER CAME AHEAD OF SCIENCE

SOUTHAMPTON (AP) — Police today arrested two crew members of a British exploration ship just back from the Antarctic on charges of throwing overboard valuable biological specimens kept in the ship's refrigerator because they were interfering with their supply of cold beer.

Sir Vivian Fuchs, British Mount Everest and Antarctic explorer, told a dockside news conference the specimens disappeared about two weeks ago.

"The specimens represent a year's work for two men, which would have led to higher degrees," he said. "The loss is very serious."

The ship brought back about 20 scientists and support workers who have been in the Antarctic for periods up to two years.

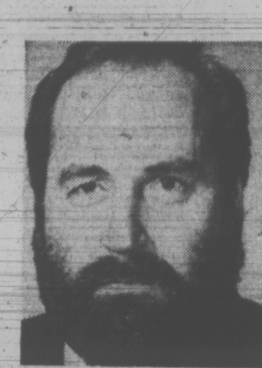

"purporting to authorize them to continue operating pending the issuance of a permanent provincial licence."

"Federal legislative authority over radio communications and broadcasting, including community antenna television undertakings, has been upheld in all the relevant decisions of the courts," the federal minister said.

"In our view, these actions by the Public Service Board of Quebec, with the support of the responsible Quebec minister, are consequently ultra vires (beyond their jurisdiction) and represent an encroachment on federal authority which the government intends to resist by all the means at its disposal."

Pelletier said the Quebec action was "particularly disappointing" in view of the federal policy proposals a month ago to grant the provinces substantially more say in communications policy. He noted the proposals are to be discussed with the provinces at a conference this fall.

Public Servants Get 10%

Tentative agreement has been reached for salary increases of 10 per cent and more for the province's 31,000 public servants.

The announcement came today from Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall and John Fryer, general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Union (BCGEU).

All public servants earning $750 per month or less will get an across-the-board increase of $75 per month. Those public servants making more than $750 per month will get raises of 10 per cent.

RETROACTIVE TO APRIL 1

The increases for both groups will be retroactive to April 1 of this year, and will be reflected to June pay cheques.

Also tentatively agreed upon after Thursday's full day of negotiating was an improvement in vacations for 1973.

Employees with 10 years' service or more will receive 17 days of vacation and employees with 15 years' service or more will get four weeks.

Hall also announced sizeable increases in the salaries to be paid deputy ministers in the civil service. They are now paid between $26,000 and $27,000 a year.

Under the new agreement, deputy ministers will get between $33,000 and $42,000 per year, depending on the classification in which the government places them. Hall said the criteria for classification of deputy ministers will be made public within a few weeks.

$14 MILLION TAB

Hall said salary increases for all civil servants will cost the provincial treasury about $14 million in the present fiscal year, of which $8.5 million was allowed for in this year's budget. He said the rest of the money will be provided through special warrants.

Fryer expressed satisfaction with the negotiated increases, saying the BCGEU's negotiating committee will recommend acceptance of the agreement to the union membership.

He said there was "a real sense of give and take" throughout the negotiating session, which he said was much different from negotiating sessions with previous governments.

"In these negotiations we were able to reach a satisfactory agreement without rattling the sabres and pounding the table," he said.

The BCGEU represents 18,000 of the province's 31,000 public servants. Hall said the negotiated increases will apply to all public servants, not only those in the BCGEU.

"From the viewpoint of the government and the people of the province, these negotiations are a positive indication that proposed collective bargaining legislation for provin-

QUIT AT 100, LIVE TO 140

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — A United States veterans administration study suggests that life expectancy in coming decades could be increased to 120-to-140 years if the retirement age is increased to 100.

Dr. Roy M. Hamlin, a research psychologist at the Danville, Ill., administration hospital, has found indications that people live for as long as they feel needed. Thus research on old age stresses behavioral programs.

BONN ARMED FOR BREZHNEV

BONN (AP) — Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev arrived today for his first trip to the West in 19 months.

The West German capital has been turned into a virtual fortress for the occasion by a small army of protecting police.

The Russian leader's five-day summit meeting with Chancellor Willy Brandt marks, symbolically at least, a significant step toward healing the wounds of a war that killed 20 million Russians and more than 3½ million Germans.

Brezhnev is the first Soviet leader to visit West Germany and the most guarded official guest the Bonn government has ever had.

Ottawa to Fight Quebec on TV

OTTAWA (UPI) — Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said today the Quebec government had overstepped its jurisdiction when it used a form of licences to cable television companies.

He said the federal government would fight the provincial action.

In a statement to the House of Commons, Pelletier attacked the recent issuance by the Quebec Public Service Board of "temporary certificates" to cable TV companies

"In these circumstances," he said, "the government is not prepared to accept unilateral action by any province."

"The government is, nevertheless, quite willing to enter into discussion with the government of Quebec with a view to determining the most appropriate means for having the constitutional issue involved in this matter settled by the courts, the governments of the other provinces being kept informed of these discussions."

"I further wish to give notice that in the event the government of Quebec persists in its intended action, the government will not hesitate to initiate appropriate action on its own behalf including action in the courts if necessary," Pelletier said.

In an exchange of correspondence in February, Pelletier had warned Quebec Communications Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier the federal government would not accept its planned action in the cable TV field.

It's Undeclared War: Truth Versus Effect

Most newspapermen, asked to give their opinion of public relations types, would agree that they are very nice people, but, of course, you wouldn't want your sister to marry one.

Feeling somewhat that way myself I was doubly perplexed one recent day when, by coincidence, I was offered a public relations job in the morning and, that very same evening, spent three or four hours with a whole bunch of high-pressure image-makers, the very cream of the public relations "industry" in this province.

It's one of the anomalies of the newspaper business that we who do the writing for them get, on average, about half the income that's earned by those whose main job is to try to get things into print.

I don't mind admitting that I had to give it a lot of thought, fully six seconds, before regretfully rejecting the offer that might have changed me from an ink-stained wretch with a mind of his own to a respectable business man with the mind of a corporation.

It was a decision that I thought about a lot later that evening in attending a dinner of the B.C. branch of the Media Club of Canada. This was once the Women's Press Club, made up largely of newspaper women, some of whom I have loved madly for several years. Not a single one of them was at this dinner. Almost all of the membership of the new organization, it turned out, were public relations people.

They are, I hasten to note, a new breed. The old-time public relations man was, more often than not, a huckster intent on protecting his client and manipulating newspapers. It is one of the minor triumphs of the business I love that we weren't to be conned. Now the so-called PR man or woman provides a service that's very often helpful in providing relevant facts or arranging interviews.

The danger they represent is simply that they've an enormous power in shaping public opinion, certainly more power than they or the public seem to realize. The newspaperman is often in the invidious position of turning to them for information and, at the same time, questioning every morsel of information they volunteer, a paranoia that simply did not exist in journalism when you went directly to the source of news without the in-between agent.

There is not a single giant private corporation, not an arm of government, not a public utility, not a commercial enterprise of any size that does not have a public relations representative whose every working hour is spent in making his masters look good.

Every morning when I arrive at work my mail slot is bulging with sophisticated propaganda from school boards, government ministries, book publishers, television networks, chambers of commerce, marketing boards, women's groups, sports enterprises. You name it. The ubiquitous public relations man is everywhere, applying the subtle pressure of his advocacy.

It is not a dishonorable profession. Myself, I'd have lost nothing but a ridiculous vanity in becoming a highly-paid spokesman for an organization with whose purpose I am fully in sympathy. The men and women of this Media Club are sincere, hard-working, loyal to their employers and their employers' aims. Some, in fact, are ex-newspaper people who simply made an arbitrary choice based entirely on the financial rewards.

But it takes no great imagination to see that, unwittingly or not, they pose a serious threat. If the aim of a newspaper is truth, as it ought to be, and the aim of a public relations man is effect, as it appears to be, then the growing power and influence of the image-maker is a frightening thing.

It can be countered only by better, more dedicated newspapermen, but when the newspaper is offering six pence and the corporation is offering the moon — well, they may get your sister, after all.

Prison Move Interests Allmand

Times Staff

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand has agreed to consider the request of Metchocin residents who are fighting to get the William Head penitentiary removed to Bentinck Island, just inside Race Rocks.

The Metchocin Ratepayers Association and the Albert Head Ratepayers Association are banding together to get the prison moved to the island.

Allmand phoned MRA chairman John Waterman Thursday night.

"He was quite interested in our counter-proposal to have the prison placed on Bentinck Island and the oceanographic institute installed at William Head," Waterman said today.

"He's definitely interested, it's giving him an out. He said he didn't realize that the proposed site for the oceanographic institute (Pat Bay) was so close. He thought it was 200 or 300 miles away."

... talked to minister

Allmand has asked that the MRA and AHRA put their submission in writing.

The two groups are circulating a petition and holding a mass meeting in Metchocin Community Hall at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Waterman said he hopes that all residents concerned about the William Head prison, soon to be changed from minimum to medium-security, will attend.

He will also invite a representative from the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, who also want the prison removed from William Head.

Chamber president Terry Farmer says keeping the prison there could lead to a "nasty international incident."

The Pearson College of the Pacific, which will have students from many Pacific Rim countries, will be built at nearby Pedder Bay.

"It (William Head) is definitely going to be a trouble," Farmer said. "If there are similar incidents to the attacks made after the recent escape and if it involved a student or students from other countries."

Farmer sees no promise that increasing security of the prison will cut all risks of escapes.

He bases his lack of confidence in the number of escapades made from medium and maximum-security prisons across the country.

He said the Chamber is convinced that William Head should be moved, not only because of safety to residents and visitors to the area, but because of the value of the land on which it is housed.

"The property is far too valuable," he said, "to be used for a prison."

"I realize we need prisons but they should be placed farther inland. The property would be a perfect site for research into marine technology."

The GVCC has advocated

that the federal government's proposed oceanographic institute should be at William Head instead of Pat Bay.

Manager Brian Small suggested that Allmand and Environment Minister Jack Davis "make a switch" and build the institute at William Head.

TEACH US TO SHOOT!

Residents on Sandgate in Metchocin, where Colin Bowen was attacked Sunday, are planning to get fire-arms and learn how to use them.

"We must protect our families," Ed Phillips, of 5129 Sandgate, said today.

He said he and his neighbors will ask the RCMP for instruction in the use of fire-arms.

Phillips said the penitentiary system has overlooked one potential danger — William Head escapees could arm themselves from the armed forces' Rocky Point depot.

"Rocky Point is not very far away," he said, "and not that well protected by guards."

"There are bombs and all kinds of large and small ammunition there. If one or a couple of these desperate criminals managed to get in there they could lay their hands on an arsenal big enough to threaten Metchocin — the whole of the Greater Victoria area, for that matter."

Pointing out that the Capital Regional District has bought parkland in the area, he wondered who would visit there with "this kind of threat hanging over them."

Parks Ordering Tough Action On Rowdyism

Vandalism and rowdyism won't stand a chance in provincial camps grounds at the weekend.

Alan McFarland, assistant supervisor at Goldstream, said today regulations will be enforced.

"Gangs of youths between 14 and 17 years of age cut trees, smashed tables and removed signs over the Easter weekend. We don't want this to happen again," he said.

Only registered campers will be allowed inside provincial camps after 11 p.m.

Campsite occupancy is limited to four persons and two vehicles. This does not apply to a family group or of two families, providing the site is large enough to accommodate them.

Driving around campgrounds will not be allowed.

Visitors will be asked to leave their cars at the gate and to walk unless they are elderly or have children.

Provincial parks director Bob Ahrens said the branch does not like to tighten its park regulations, "but the behavior of unsupervised high school groups over the Easter weekend left much to be desired."

"It's a difficult problem. If parental concern for their children is lacking, something must be done to prevent a minority spoiling things for others."

"Some of our parks supervisors report that some parents even drop off young children between 10 and 14 years and then go away expecting our park staffs to act as baby sitters," he said.

Unsettled weather with both cloud and sunny periods is the outlook for the weekend.

The Victoria area is expected to cloud over tonight and become sunny again by Saturday afternoon. There is the chance of few showers early Saturday morning.

Temperatures today and Saturday are expected to range between the low 60s and high 40s.

Patients, Not Experts, to Decide

By SUSAN RITTAN

Art expert opinions will carry no weight in Gorge Road Hospital's decision whether or not to obliterate the controversial murals in its new wing, hospital administrator Bill Morrison said today.

"If the murals are offensive to the patients, it doesn't matter what artists think," Morrison said.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson suggested Thursday that independent and unbiased experts from the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria judge the murals before steps are taken to paint over them.

Morrison said he would be interested in hearing the comments of experts, but they would not affect his decision.

He has said that one and possibly more of the four murals in each of the new wing's dining rooms will be obliterated when artist Luis Merino has finished them.

"It's not for general consumption, it's for the patients," he said of the murals. "We're interested basically in how the paintings affect the patients."

Colin Graham, art gallery director, will see the murals Monday.

Irene Warren, chairman of the board of directors of the Gorge Hospital, supported Morrison's decision.

"We are concerned with one thing only, and that is the patients," she said.

"If something bothers them then we have to take a good look at it."

Warren said she thought a painting of "a lovely river, quiet stream" would have done more to brighten patients' lives than Merino's semi-abstract murals.

Merino has been working on the murals, four in the dining rooms and one in the foyer to the building's back entrance, since February.

He is financed by a $12,000 Local Initiatives Project grant which he shares with sculptor Jose Polutnik.

Hummel Again Faces Income Tax Charges

B.C. Supreme Court has ordered former Victoria lawyer-businessman David Hummel to face charges of income tax evasion before a provincial court judge.

Hummel was charged Feb. 25, 1971, with evading payment of taxes between Jan. 1, 1965 and April 30, 1969, on income of $127,921.98.

He was also charged with four counts of making "false or deceptive" statements on his income tax returns.

After eight days of testimony before provincial court Judge E. F. N. Robinson, the charges were dismissed on the grounds that the Crown had failed to prove "mens rea" — guilty intent to commit the offences.

The Crown, represented by D. M. Gordon and Robert Hutchison, appealed Robinson's decision April 16 and 17 of this year, before Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton of B.C. Supreme Court.

Wootton allowed the appeal and ordered the case be remitted to the provincial court for completion.

In his reasons Wootton said Hummel's lawyer, J. E. Spencer, made his motion for dismissal before declaring whether or not he would tender any evidence on behalf of Hummel.

"Mr. Spencer's motion was something that could only be established upon review of the whole case, as it would have been concluded before presentation to a jury," said Wootton.

He ruled that Robinson should have refused to hear the motion until Spencer had elected to call or not to call evidence in Hummel's defence.

"If that had been done, the case would have been in a position to be determined by the court," said Wootton.

Hummel is allowed 30 days to appeal Wootton's decision. No date will be set for trial until the 30-day appeal period has elapsed.

Q. Who was the first person to die and be buried in Victoria and was the burial in Pioneer Square?

A. The first recorded burial is that of Charles Ross, the first commander of Fort Victoria. He died in 1844 and was buried in the "burial grounds" located in a ravine at the corner of Douglas and Johnson Streets. These graves were later moved to Pioneer Square on Quadra.

Q. What is the address of the Canada Games Lottery?—D.C.C.

A. The address is 1973 Canada Summer Games Lottery, 810 Royal Avenue, New Westminster, B.C.

Alcoholism Centre Opening Soon

A mid-July start is expected for B.C.'s first privately-run care centre for alcoholism.

The $1.5 million project on the north slope of Mt. Newton in North Saanich could be operational before the end of the year, said J. George Strachan, president of Gillian Manor Ltd.

Farmer Construction Ltd. has been awarded a contract for the project, designed by architects Siddall, Dennis and Warner, for the 100-acre site on McPavish Road.

The closest similar projects are Donwood Foundation in Toronto, and Collingwood Acres in Edmonton, Strachan said.

Gillian Manor will run independently of B.C. Hospital Insurance Service or government assistance, he said.

Rates will be $35-$50 a day, all found, depending on whether single or double accommodation is taken.

Strachan, himself a recovered alcoholic with 28 years' experience in studying alcoholism treatment, said the average length of stay in such an institution is 21-28 days.

Early referrals by management and the professions achieve a 50-80 per cent recovery rate, he said.

The centre will offer individual and group therapy, after-care and follow-up services. Up to 65 patients may be accommodated on a live-in basis.

Western Canada is reported to have 200,000 alcoholics, up from 63,980 in 1954.

"In most areas," Strachan said, "the dependency on drug alcohol is at least 10 times more serious, with higher incidence of dependency, higher death rate and cost factor than all other drug dependencies together."

Today's average alcoholic is

40, with two children and two cars, one in three being a woman compared with one in five in recent years.

Alcoholism treatment is hindered, Strachan said, by the fact that fewer than 2 per cent of doctors are willing to accept problem drinkers as patients and many hospitals will not admit them.

At Gillian Manor, alcoholics will be treated within the framework of community and family and be encouraged to take part in Alcoholics Anonymous.

Stable and recovered alcoholics will form part of the staff, Strachan said.

UNION CENTRE TO EXPAND

Shareholders of the Victoria Building Co-Operative Union voted approval Thursday night for a $200,000 expansion of the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra.

The plan is to extend the second floor over the Quadra Street parking lot, union secretary Larry Ryan said today. This would provide an extra 8,000 square feet for offices and meeting halls.

"We are hoping for occupancy early next year," he said.

It's Undeclared War: Truth Versus Effect

Most newspapermen, asked to give their opinion of public relations types, would agree that they are very nice people, but, of course, you wouldn't want your sister to marry one.

Feeling somewhat that way myself I was doubly perplexed one recent day when, by coincidence, I was offered a public relations job in the morning and, that very same evening, spent three or four hours with a whole bunch of high-pressure image-makers, the very cream of the public relations "industry" in this province.

It's one of the anomalies of the newspaper business that we who do the writing for them get, on average, about half the income that's earned by those whose main job is to try to get things into print.

I don't mind admitting that I had to give it a lot of thought, fully six seconds, before regretfully rejecting the offer that might have changed me from an ink-stained wretch with a mind of his own to a respectable business man with the mind of a corporation.

It was a decision that I thought about a lot later that evening in attending a dinner of the B.C. branch of the Media Club of Canada. This was once the Women's Press Club, made up largely of newspaper women, some of whom I have loved madly for several years. Not a single one of them was at this dinner. Almost all of the membership of the new organization, it turned out, were public relations people.

They are, I hasten to note, a new breed. The old-time public relations man was, more often than not, a huckster intent on protecting his client and manipulating newspapers. It is one of the minor triumphs of the business I love that we weren't to be conned. Now the so-called PR man or woman provides a service that's very often helpful in providing relevant facts or arranging interviews.

The danger they represent is simply that they've an enormous power in shaping public opinion, certainly more power than they or the public seem to realize. The newspaperman is often in the invidious position of turning to them for information and, at the same time, questioning every morsel of information they volunteer, a paranoia that simply did not exist in journalism when you went directly to the source of news without the in-between agent.

There is not a single giant private corporation, not an arm of government, not a public utility, not a commercial enterprise of any size that does not have a public relations representative whose every working hour is spent in making his masters look good.

Every morning when I arrive at work my mail slot is bulging with sophisticated propaganda from school boards, government ministries, book publishers, television networks, chambers of commerce, marketing boards, women's groups, sports enterprises. You name it. The ubiquitous public relations man is everywhere, applying the subtle pressure of his advocacy.

It is not a dishonorable profession. Myself, I'd have lost nothing but a ridiculous vanity in becoming a highly-paid spokesman for an organization with whose purpose I am fully in sympathy. Premier Dave Barrett today announced five new ministers for his cabinet and gave Highways Minister Robert Strachan a new portfolio with added responsibilities, including the presidency of the B.C. Railway.

The new ministers are:

Gary Laik, MLA for Vancouver Centre, who becomes Minister of Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce. The portfolio is currently held by Attorney General Alex Macdonald.

Graham Lea, MLA for Prince Rupert, becomes Minister of Highways.

Jack Radford, MLA for Vancouver Centre, becomes Minister of Recreation and Conservation, relieving Resources Minister Bob Williams of one-half of his double portfolio.

Phyllis Young, MLA for Vancouver-Little Mountain, becomes Minister Without Portfolio responsible for consumer affairs, a newly-created post.

Lorne Nicolson, MLA for Nelson-Creston, becomes Minister Without Portfolio responsible for housing, also a new position.

Strachan, former NDP leader, becomes Minister of Commercial Transportation and Communications, a new department. Strachan will retain responsibility for the B.C. Ferries, all government aircraft, the Motor Vehicle branch, the data processing branch and will remain president of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia.

Strachan was also appointed to the board of directors of the B.C. Railway, and will become chairman of the board and president of the railway in the spring of 1974.

Barrett said it is his intention to make Strachan president of the railway as soon as negotiations with the federal government on rail development are completed and when consultants' reports are completed and reviewed by the legislature.

The premier said Nicolson and Young will become full members of the cabinet when constitutional amendments are finalized setting up departments of housing and consumer affairs.

He said the necessary legislation will be passed possibly in the fall session and at the very latest at the spring session of 1974.

Barrett's appointment of new ministers leaves only himself and Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall with double portfolios. Hall is also responsible for travel industry while Barrett holds the finance portfolio.

B.C. Civil Servants Get 10%

Tentative agreement has been reached for salary increases of 10 per cent and more for the province's 31,000 public servants.

The announcement came today from Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall and John Fryer, general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Union (BGEU).

All public servants earning $750 per month or less will get an across-the-board increase of 75 cents per month. Those public servants making more than $750 per month will get raises of 10 per cent.

RETROACTIVE TO APRIL 1
The increases for both groups will be retroactive to April 1 of this year, and will be reflected in June pay cheques.

Also tentatively agreed upon after Thursday's full day of negotiating was improvement in vacations for 1973.

Employees with 10 years' service or more will receive 17 days of vacation and employees with 15 years' service or more will get four weeks.

Hall also announced sizeable increases in salaries to be paid deputy ministers in the civil service. They are now paid between $26,000 and $27,000 a year.

Under the new agreement, deputy ministers will get between $33,000 and $42,000 per year, depending on the classification in which the government places them. Hall said the criteria for classification of deputy ministers will be made public within a few weeks.

$14 MILLION TAB

Hall said salary increases for all civil servants will cost the provincial treasury about $14 million in the present fiscal year, of which $8.5 million was allowed for in this year's budget. He said the rest of the money will be provided through special warrants.

Fryer expressed satisfaction with the negotiated increases, saying the BGEU's negotiating committee will recommend acceptance of the agreement to the union membership.

He said there was "a real sense of give and take" throughout the negotiating session, which he said was much different from negotiating sessions with previous governments.

"In these negotiations we were able to reach a satisfactory agreement without rattling the sabres and pounding the table," he said.

The BGEU represents 18,000 of the province's 31,000 public servants. Hall said the negotiated increases will apply to all public servants, not only those in the BGEU.

"From the viewpoint of the government and the people of the province, these negotiations are a positive indication that proposed collective bargaining legislation for provin-

QUIT AT 100, LIVE TO 140

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — A United States veterans administration study suggests that life expectancy in coming decades could be increased to 120-to-140 years if the retirement age is increased to 100.

Dr. Roy M. Hamlin, a research psychologist at the Danville, Ill., administration hospital, has found indications that people live for as long as they feel needed. Thus research on old age stresses behavioral programs.

"I further wish to give notice that in the event the government of Quebec persists in its intended action, the government will not hesitate to initiate appropriate action on its own behalf including action in the courts if necessary," Pelletier said.

In an exchange of correspondence in February, Pelletier had warned Quebec Communications Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier the federal government would not accept its planned action in the cable TV field.

Ulster Car Bomb Kills 4 Soldiers

BELFAST (CP) — Four soldiers died in a car bomb explosion in Omagh today after one of Northern Ireland's bloodiest nights in years. The 24-hour death toll stood at eight.

The other four were a cattle dealer shot near the Irish republic, a Catholic killed while playing darts, a sniper shot by an army marksman, and a 14-year-old Catholic schoolgirl who died in the hospital today after being wounded in a gun-battle Thursday night.

The girl, Eileen Mackin, and a friend were both hit when gunmen opened fire on a motorized army patrol in Belfast's Springfield area.

The car bomb caused the highest death toll in a single incident for British troops since they were first called in to help combat the sectarian violence that erupted in Northern Ireland four years ago.

The bomb exploded as the soldiers got into the booby-trapped car. It left a two-foot-deep crater in the ground and scattered the men's bodies all over the hotel parking lot and a nearby field.

All the soldiers were off duty at the time.

Earlier in the night a 22-year-old cattle dealer, Michael Leonard, was shot with in sight of the Irish republic border while fleeing from police in County Fermanagh.

Police chased his car as the man ignored repeated orders to halt. He was finally

COLD BEER CAME AHEAD OF SCIENCE

SOUTHAMPTON (AP) — Police today arrested two crew members of a British exploration ship just back from the Antarctic on charges of throwing overboard valuable biological specimens kept in the ship's refrigerator because they were interfering with their supply of cold beer.

Sir Vivian Fuchs, British Mount Everest and Antarctic explorer, told a dockside news conference the specimens disappeared about two weeks ago.

"The specimens represent a year's work for two men, which would have led to higher degrees," he said. "The loss is very serious."

The ship brought back about 20 scientists and support workers who have been in the Antarctic for periods up to two years.

Ottawa to Fight Quebec on TV

OTTAWA (UPI) — Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said today the Quebec government had overstepped its jurisdiction when it used a form of licences to cable television companies. He said the federal government would fight the provincial action.

In a statement to the House of Commons, Pelletier attacked the recent issuance by the Quebec Public Service Board of "temporary certificates" to cable TV companies

"purporting to authorize them to continue operating pending the issuance of a permanent provincial licence."

"Federal legislative authority over radio communications and broadcasting, including community antenna television undertakings, has been upheld in all the relevant decisions of the courts," the federal minister said.

"In our view, these actions by the Public Service Board of Quebec, with the support of the responsible Quebec minister, are consequently ultra vires (beyond their jurisdiction) and represent an encroachment on federal authority which the government intends to resist by all the means at its disposal."

Pelletier said the Quebec action was "particularly disappointing" in view of the federal policy proposals a month ago to grant the provinces substantially more say in communications policy. He noted the proposals are to be discussed with the provinces at a conference this fall.

"In these circumstances," he said, "the government is not prepared to accept unilateral action by any province."

"The government is, nevertheless, quite willing to enter into discussion with the government of Quebec with a view to determining the most appropriate means for having the constitutional issue involved in this matter settled by the courts, the governments of the other provinces being kept informed of these discussions."

"I further wish to give notice that in the event the government of Quebec persists in its intended action, the government will not hesitate to initiate appropriate action on its own behalf including action in the courts if necessary," Pelletier said.

In an exchange of correspondence in February, Pelletier had warned Quebec Communications Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier the federal government would not accept its planned action in the cable TV field.

VIEW FROM THE TOP has charms all its own. Swinging high on the ferris wheel over the Jaycee Fair would seem a private enough place for a fellow and his girl. After all, there may be plenty of people around but they're all down there. All but one photographer. (John McKay photo.)

POLLUTING 'LICENCE'

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. was fined $1,000 in provincial court today for polluting the air around its plant here.

In passing sentence, Judge Joseph McMahon said Ford was using the court as a "licensing bureau" to permit it to continue breaking the law.

Judge McMahon said Ford had done everything it could to comply with provincial legislation short of closing the foundry. He said Ford will continue polluting the air because technology cannot stop it.

ICCS Money Crisis

Times News Services
The International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) is facing "an emergency financial crisis," commission sources said today.

The sources added that the commission no longer has enough funds to pay its private contractors, although, so far, none of the contractors has cut off services.

It is understood that the ICCS owes almost $750,000 to Air America, which supplies all air services for the commission.

The ICCS has asked the four parties to the Paris peace agreement — the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the Viet Cong — to match their original contribution of 4.5 million French francs apiece as an interim measure. There has been no reply from any of the parties. The issue was to be discussed at a meeting of the commission today.

In Paris, U.S. foreign affairs adviser Henry Kissinger and North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho Thursday began and ended in a show of smiles and handshakes their first closed-door meeting to salvage the precarious Vietnam cease-fire agreement they negotiated

NEW YORK (AP) — The televised Watergate hearings spent more than five hours Thursday angering game-show fans and those who find more drama in soap opera than in the hunt for the truth in the packed Senate Caucus Room in Washington.

The start of the hearings before the Senate committee marked the first time since February, 1966, that all three United States networks televised all or part of a Senate hearing live.

But a sample check of television stations around the U.S. showed that thousands of viewers preferred entertainment to history. They said so in irate phone calls that swamped switchboards.

"They're killing us," said a Columbia Broadcasting System operator here.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Watergate conspirator James McCord Jr. testified today that he was told by a White House aide that President Nixon "was aware" of efforts to pressure McCord to keep quiet and plead guilty in the bugging case with a promise of executive clemency later.

Testifying under oath at the second day of senate hearings into the Watergate scandal, McCord said the clemency offer had been made to him by White House staffer John Caulfield at a private meeting during the Watergate trial in January.

"Political pressure from the White House was conveyed to me in January, 1973, by John Caulfield to remain silent, take executive clemency by going off to prison quietly," McCord said softly.

"And I was told that while there I would receive financial aid and later rehabilitation and a job," he continued. "I was further told in a January meeting in 1973 with Caulfield that the president of the United States was aware of our meeting, that the result of our meeting would be conveyed to the president, and at a future meeting there would likely be a personal message from the president himself."

Committee chairman Sam Ervin, D-N.C., interrupted as McCord read from a prepared statement to caution that the testimony was purely hearsay.

"The testimony of Mr. McCord as to what was told to him by John Caulfield would not be accepted in a court of law, to connect the president with what Mr. Caulfield was doing," Ervin said.

"But it is admissible to show whether or not Mr. Caulfield is a party to any agreement to attempt to suppress information about what is popularly known

BONN ARMED FOR BREZHNEV

BONN (AP) — Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev arrived today for his first trip to the West in 19 months.

The West German capital has been turned into a virtual fortress for the occasion by a small army of protecting police.

The Russian leader's five-day summit meeting with Chancellor Willy Brandt marks, symbolically at least, a significant step toward healing the wounds of a war that killed 20 million Russians and more than 3 1/2 million Germans.

Brezhnev is the first Soviet leader to visit West Germany and the most guarded official guest the Bonn government has ever had.
